ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

First, I thank God for the opportunity and privilege to study the subject of divinity. Without acknowledging God's grace, this study would be futile.

I would like to thank my family for their outstanding tolerance of my late studies which takes away our family time. Without their support and kind endurance, I could not have completed this prolonged task.

I am grateful to the staffs of University of Pretoria who have provided all the essential process of official matter. Without their kind help, my studies would have been difficult. Many thanks go to my fellow teachers in the Nairobi International School of Theology. I thank David and Sarah O'Brien for their painstaking proofreading of my thesis. Furthermore, I appreciate Dr Wayne Johnson and Dr Paul Mumo for their suggestions in my early stage of thesis writing. I also thank my students with whom I discussed and developed many insights of God's relationship with mankind during the Hebrew Exegesis lectures. I also remember my former teachers from Gordon-Conwell Theological Seminary, especially from the OT Department who have shaped my academic stand and inspired to pursue the subject of this thesis. They are, namely, Prof Walter C Kaiser, Prof Jeffrey Niehaus, Prof Gary Pratico, Prof Douglas Stuart, Prof Duane Garrett, and Meredith Kline.

My utmost gratitude goes to two of my Professors at University of Pretoria who have guided my entire study. Prof PGJ Meiring's valuable suggestions and encouragements were helpful motivation to finish this thesis. My Supervisor Prof DJ Human displayed his unyielding mentorship over my academic pilgrimage. He is the person that every student would want as their supervisor! His compassionate supervision over my studies helped me to stand firm and to pursue it to the end. I could not possibly express my gratitude to Prof Human in the human language. I am most appreciative for Prof Human.
