SEE SOME 'SLACKERS' HERE."—The Young V.C.'s Call To The Men Of London.

Corporal Holmes had none of the Park orator's artifices, but his simple words attracted an enormous crowd.

Leaving his home for Hyde Park. He only came out of hospital on Thursday.

A chance meeting with his elder brother-a recruit from Canada.

Corporal Holmes, Bermondsey's V.C. hero, gave yesterday, in Hyde Park, the message to the young men of London who can go out and won't. "I see some 'slackers' here," he said. "I see in front of me young men who are eligible and fit. Why don't you join?" It was the appeal of the lad who had done his share and was willing to do it again. No orator could have delivered a more direct and telling message.—(Daily Sketch Photographs.)

en many letters concerning the babies to which your "Gripe Water" has been a benefit, I feel it my duty to let you know what a benefit it has been to me.

My baby boy has had your wonderful "Gripe Water" since he was a fortnight old, and I have never had a restless night with him. During the usual painful time of vaccination I gave him the "Gripe Water" regularly, and he got through it without the slightest trouble whatever. He is cutting his teeth now, but I never know when they come through until I feel them, as he cuts them so easily, and it is all due to your "Gripe Water."

I feel I can safely recommend it to every mother who has babies to bring up.

He weighed 18 lb. 8 oz. at six months, and he is still far above the average weight at seven months. Wishing you and your "Gripe Water" every success,

I remain, yours faithfully, Mrs. M. STRUMPSON.

P.S.—You can make what use you please of this letter, as I want every mother to know what splendid stuff it is.

WHEN war was declared Mr. Trevelyan resigned his position of Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Education, owing to the views he held about the war. His later explanations were so extraordinary that the Liberal Council of the Elland Division have now unanimously decided not to adopt Mr. Trevelyan again as their member of Parliament. This is a plain hint that he has lost the confidence of his supporters, and in decency he should at once resign.

WE need not read very deeply into Mr. Trevelyan's speeches to see how thoroughly justified his constituents are in disowning him. His first statement was that this war was no concern of ours, and should four sons and three daughters. not have involved us in the conflict. HIS most extraordinary statement was that it was for Russia we were fighting! The French, he said, did not want to fight, but were dragged in by Russia. How any public man could make such a display of ignorance is truly astounding. Here is a bit of one letter:—

Dear Mr. Gossip,—I never knew you were such a beastly cad! Your criticism of "The Half-Sister" is a piece of malignant spite. Are you a rejected suitor of Miss Croydale's? I can't imagine anyone but a lin.ed lover going to so much trouble to give vent to his jealous feelings. If you are not in love with Miss Croydale, what grievance have you against the lady? You are anything but a gentleman! I hope the public will go in droves to see this play, as you are the limit for rudeness, spite, and everything which is nasty.—Another Budding Dramatist.

"The Joker's" Prospects.

THERE WILL BE a longer life, I should imagine, for "The Joker," which appeared at the New Theatre on Saturday night, than for some of the farces with which we have been bombarded of late. If it hadn't been for a deplorably weak last act and some mistakes in casting it might have been hailed as an undoubted winner. There is still hope,

A Clever Comedian.

Ir is attractive because it is topical without being too serious or tactless in any way, because a "spy" farce is fairly novel, and because there appears in it a comedian who is "immense" and makes a smallish part the funniest thing that has been seen for quite a long time. I refer to Mr. Stanley Brown, who plays a Scotland Yard detective. I don't know what Mr. Brown has done before, although the name is familiar, but I'm certain that I—and a great many other people, too—will know what he is doing in the future.

HOWEVER, I don't want to put "The Joker" himself in the background, for really Mr. Norman Page did very well. The Joker is, as you know, the fifty-third card in the pack, which most people throw away. The man-joker is the same sort of thing—a man everyone rejects as useless or unfit. He foils the German spies in thrilling and humorous fashion.

BE-KIND-TO-GERMANY' M.P. TO BE KICKED OUT.

Constituents Throw Over Mr. C. P. Trevelyan, Ex-Liberal Minister.

RESIGN! RESIGN! RESIGN!

The Man Who Does Not Want To See Germany Crushed.

What is Mr. Charles Philips Trevelyan, M.P. for Elland, and head of the "be-kind-to-Germany movement" going to do?

This gentleman, one of whose hobbies, according to "Who's Who," is kriegspiel, the German for war game, was Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Education when the war broke out, but resigned from the Ministry because, as he explained in a letter to his constituents, in the interests of civilisation he did not want to see Germany crushed.

The patriots and the soldiers' widows and orphans in the Elland Division, for which Mr. Trevelyan sits, have something to say about this, and the Liberal Council of the Elland Division of Yorkshire on Saturday unanimously decided not to adopt again Mr. Trevelyan in consequence of the attitude he has taken up on the war.

WHAT HE HAS SAID.

When war broke out Mr. Trevelyan explained his resignation in a letter to his constituents, passages from which are as follow:—

Rages from which are as follow:

Neither the original quarrel nor the remoter conflicts arising out of it ought to have been regarded as involving us.

We are going to war because we do not want to see France crushed.

I want as little, in the interests of civilisation, to see Germany crushed.

Yet who dares to say that, between France. Russia, and England, German civilisation may not go down in ruin?

Are we going to rejoice because Russia will be victorious, with its savage recuperative forces of acountless populations to brood over our stricken western civilisation?

And remember it is for Russia first and foremost that we are fighting. The French did not want to fight. But they were dragged in by their treaty with Russia.

We ought, in my opinion, to have had no side in this quarrel except the one overwhelming interest of our own people. That interest is peace. Blunder or no blunder, the war is here. That is the terrible present, and our simple, common duty is to help to save our dear country.

IS IT ALL NO GOOD?

At a P.S.A. at the Hither Green Congregational Church, London, Mr. Trevelyan said:

Thurch, London, Mr. Trevelyan said:—

It is no good crushing German militarism; it will only rise again. Mr. Asquith and Sir Edward Grey obtained most of their advice from the high-class, wealthy people who staff the Foreign Office and did not ask Parliament and people whether we should enter the war or keep out of it, or the decision might have been otherwise.

No territory which is inhabited by German people should be taken from Germany to compensate Belgium or France. If we were to say to Germany, "You are to have no army and no havy," that would be Prussianism over again.

What should be the attitude of the Churches towards this grave and delicate question? The Rev. F. B. Meyer, secretary of the Free Church Council, made an outspoken declaration to the Daily Sketch:

During the present week Britain is being swept by a flood of patriotic oratory the like of which has never been known in history. London alone will hold hundreds of meetings.

The idea is to stimulate recruiting, to sweep into the ranks of the army all those who, though eligible, have so far hesitated to take the step. The size of the army is to increase tremendously by Saturday next if the efforts of the recruiters succeed.

From its inception the paper has continued to grow rapidly in the public favour, until it has come to be a truism in journalism that the best things of the week are to be found in the Herald.

Every article is by a writer whose special qualifications to deal with the subject treated are unquestioned.

Its pictures have from time to time and the subject treated are in it is obvious that there are still thousands of men who have only the request in the subject treated of men who have only the request in the subject treated of men who have only the request in the subject treated of men who have only the request in the subject treated of men who have only the request in the subject treated of men who have only the request in the subject treated of men who have only the request in the subject treated of men who have only the request in the subject treated of men who have only the request in the subject treated of men who have only the request in the subject treated of men who have only the request in the subject treated of men who have only the request in the subject treated of men who have been within the subject treated are unquestioned.

Articles have been written by the score, letters by the hundred, in reply to these questions, but from the queries still coming in it is obvious that there are still thousands of men who have only the vaguest idea about the things as they affect the individual in the new Army.

That is possibly why so many of the appeals have passed them by. Many of the recruiting advertisements make a strong direct appeal, but others are not miracles of imagination. The taxi-cab advertisements are brilliant instances of futility.

And it is possible that the big series of meetings is not going to be a huge success. Patriotic speeches by M.P.s, helped out by the recruiting band, will leave much to be desired by the working man, to whom they make the appeal. More "facty" speeches are wanted; more actual experiences should be given, and the men who can give these are the men who have gone through them.

These need not be men who have been at the front; men in training at the camps know what the conditions are, and most of them are sufficiently well educated to tell about it.

than the sum of the individuals who composed it. That idea was not an English one, it was not a humane idea, and not a right idea.

It was a Continental growth, fostered by a small set of rulers and bureaucrats who liked to make the wretched people they ruled fall down and worship them.

proceeds:—
On April 16 the actions in the Carpathians were concentrated in the direction of Rostok. The enemy, notwithstanding the enormous losses he had suffered, delivered in the course of that day no fewer than 16 attacks in great strength.

These attacks, all of which were absolutely barren of result were made against the heights which we had occupied further to the east of Telepotche.
Our troops during the night of April 16-17, after a desperate fight, stormed and captured a height to the south-east of the village of Polen, where we took many prisoners.

Three enemy counter-attacks on this height were repulsed.—Reuter.

A calculation made by him at the beginning of the war had proved fairly accurate. The combatants were spending together about ten millions a day, but this did not represent anything like the whole of the loss, for every pound spent entitled, say, 10s. worth of destruction.

A French economist had reckoned that every fighting man killed represented a loss of £1,000 to the nation, and if maimed the cost was still worse. Accordingly to get at a fraction of the loss caused by the war they should multiply the figure already reached by at least 1,000.

Belgium was ruined, Serbia was already bankrupt, and he was told that the condition of Poland and East Prussia was unrealisable by those who had not seen it.

The British submarine E15 has been captured while scouting in the Dardanelles minefields.

The Admiralty issued a statement on Saturday night which announced that 100 men had lost their lives by drowning after the transport Manitou, on which they were, had been attacked by a Turkish torpedo-boat.

A further statement issued last night dissipated any mystery attaching to the first by explaining that the loss of life-which was much smaller than had been reported-was due to the capsizing of two boats.

Twenty-four men whose bodies have been identified were drowned, and 27 are missing. Turkish torpedo-boat, which had attacked the Manitou, was chased and driven ashore, and her crew made prisoners.

BRITISH SUBMARINE CAPTURED.

Goes Ashore While Scouting In The Dardanelles Minefield

From The Admiralty.

The British submarine E15, while attempting the difficult reconnaissance of the Kepetz minefield in the Dardanelles yesterday, ran ashore on Kepetz Point, according to an official statement published at Constantinople. The officers and men have been rescued and made prisoners.

An official telegram from Constantinople, says Reuter, is to the effect that the submarine has been sunk in the Dardanelles east of Karanlik. Three officers and 21 men of the crew of 31 have been rescued and captured. Among them is the former British Vice-Consul at the Dardanelles.

BRITISH CRUISER'S CHASE IN THE ÆGEAN.

Turkish Torpedo-Boat Driven Ashore And Destroyed. From The Admiralty.

Saturday Night.

The transport Manitou, carrying British troops, was attacked by a Turkish torpedo-boat in the Egean this morning. The Turkish boat fired three torpedoes, all of which missed.

The torpedo-boat then made off, chased by a British cruiser (Minerva) and destroyers, and was finally run ashore and destroyed on the coast of Chios, in Kalammuti Bay.

The crew have been made prisoners.

It is reported that about a hundred men on board the transport have lost their lives through drowning, but full particulars have not yet been received. Saturday Night.

A further report shows that the loss of life on board the transport Manitou is less than was at first reported.

It appears to have been due to one boat cap-sizing in the water and another whilst being lowered owing to the breaking of a davit. Twenty-four men were drowned and their bodies have been identified. Twenty-seven are missing. The transport herself was undamaged.

Cheerfulness

This is not the time to despond. A cheery word, a smiling face will keep dull care away-will help you through this trying time as nothing else can do. Keep cheerful yourself and wherever you go you will take cheerfulness to others.

To be cheerful one must be healthful, and health largely depends upon the blood. If you let your blood become weak and impoverished you will feel depressed, dull, and exhausted. Therefore keep your blood rich, and whenever you feel run-down, out-ofsorts, "seedy," or debilitated start taking IRON 'JELLOIDS' at once. IRON 'JELLOIDS' make the blood rich and vigorous so that the whole body benefits, vitality and energy are restored, good spirits are regainedyou feel cheerful and bright again. After Having to Give Up Her Calling Owing to Excessive Fat, She Discovered A Harmless Drugless Method which Gave Back to Her the Figure That Made Her Famous.

Over 25,000 Women have reduced their weight by her method.

Isn't this convincing proof of the value of her great discovery?

You, too, can reduce yourself even more than this by the same process if you so desire. No Drugs! No Starvation Diet! No Tiresome Exercises!

Miss Winifred Grace Hartland, the famous artist's model, is again the proud possessor of the ideal figure which made her so popular a model with artists and sculptors the world over.

To doubt but that it will prove of great benefit to the over-stout.

Miss Hartland, who has considerable means, has kindly consented to send a copy of her book free with artists and sculptors the world over.

A year ago she had become so fleshy that she was forced to give up posing. Friends persuaded her to try various fat cures, which she did, but without success. At last, when nearly at the point of despair, she took the task of removing her fat upon her own self, and after months of trials and repeated failures she eventually discovered a way that reduced her weight at the rate of a pound per day, without the use of drugs, starvation dist, tiresome exercises, or other outlandish methods which are often tried, but which invariably prove useless.

It is no trouble, no bother, yet it seems to work like magic. It strengthens the heart, enabling easy breathing, relieves that stuffy feeling, and reduces double chin, large stomach and fat hips quickly and safely. In fact, the general health is improved right from the start. Many of Miss Hartland's customers look from 10 to 15 years younger since they have taken her treatment.

Her method is so simple and harmless that it is a wonder someone has not thought of applying this means long ago. Several of her friends have tried this process with the same astonishing results, and there seems to be no question but that she has hit upon the only safe and sane way ever discovered there seems to be no question but that she has hit upon the only safe and sane way ever discovered for over-stout people for removing their excessive fat.

She has most reluctantly yielded to the persuasion of her enthusiastic friends to publish a book showing the means she employed to reduce herself to such beautiful proportions, after losing the shapeliness of her figure through superfluous fat.

The first copies of this interesting book are just off the press, and are certainly a work of art. The book is written in extremely fascinating style, and contains some very fine illustrations of this famous model. It is wonderfully instructive, and there is

Whooping-Cough, Measles, Bronchitis, Influenza

Now that these illnesses are so prevalent, mothers are earnestly advised to build up their children with Virol, which has been proved to possess such remarkable powers of restoring wasted vitality.

Mrs. Pegden, 58, Knowle Road, Brixton, says:—"My boy at the age of nine months had a very serious illness (pneumonia and inflammation of the bowels). He was too ill to take milk, and being advised to try Virol we were immediately astonished at the improvement shown. You will see by his photo what a fine bonny little chap he is now (3 years old), and whenever he is run-down we immediately fly to Virol. It has, I consider, saved many a doctor's bill."

The serious nervous exhaustion after influenza is a sure sign of the physical condition in which the patient is left. This unhappy condition is overcome by the wonderful restorative power of Virol,

"Mrs. Stephen Ody has much pleasure in stating that Doan's Backache Kidney Pills have brought wonderful relief from rheumatism and kidney complaint of five years standing.

"Backache, pain and stiffness in the limbs, joints and muscles were early kidney symptoms that preceded chronic rheumatism and painful swellings in the knees and ankles, which prevented sleep and made movement unbearable.

"Mrs. Ody congratulates the makers of Doan's Pills upon their splendid kidney medicine, and hopes this note will be helpful to others. She is using her third box only now, but is confident of a complete cure, for already the pains and stiffness are gone, and she can sleep and get about in comfort, even to walking up and down stairs."

AN IMPORTANT WEEK IN RACING CIRCLES.

Great Metropolitan And City And Suburban Surveys.

DON DE ROCA'S DERBY FAILURE.

There will be some important racing at Epsom and Sandown this week. The Spring Meeting at the former place is often chosen for the debut of smart two-year-olds. In this category the racing has appeared up to date, and, though he can be opposed by some promising youngsters in the Hyde Park Plate, he ought to win.

THE CREAT METROPOLITAN.

On the opening day the chief handicap is the Great Metropolitan, but the horses engaged are not of very good class.

Knight's Key has been running so well of late that he must come into the reckoning, and Gravelotte ran well enough in the race last year to have a chance. He was then third to the second of Vermouth, and for a four lengths beating Gravelotte has a pull of 13lb.

In preference to Vermouth, however, Mr. Percy Heybourn will probably rely on Desmond's Song, who has proved himself to be a smart hurdler. A prominent light-weight has been secured for the the coit is expected to stay the journey better than most.

Escott will rely on Ragtime King instead of Polygamist, and the former has been doing plenty of long distance work.

He belongs to a soldier, and it would be quite in keeping with the times if she should score. But whatever wins will have Fill Up to beat, for she is a very genuine little filly, and boasts a rare finishing burst.

THE CITY AND SUBURBAN.

The City and Suburban has a very open appearance, and it is unfortunate that Diadumenos may not be able to run. He has been affected with a slight dry cough since Newbury, and will now probably be reserved for the Kempton "Jubilee."

Of the horses which ran in the Newbury Cup Woodwild has slightly the best of the reckoning, but it is said that Morton will start Black Jester in preference to Blue Stone. If so the top weight will probably start favourite, but his trainer has a nice line to the form and will know to a nicety what chance he has of beating Woodwild.

The latter will be ridden by Dick, and provided he steers clear of interference, a thing which cannot always be guaranteed at Epsom, he will want a lot of beating.

Foy has been retained to ride Carancho, and the colt won in such easy fashion at Newmarket last week that he cannot be said to be out of the race, week that he cannot be said to be out of the face, even with his penalty.

Carrickfergus was a disappointing animal last year, but he is said to be very fit.

Candytuft was second to Maiden Erlegh last year, but now that he has earned a penalty I prefer of these is Polycrates, whose defeat at New-

One of these is Polycrates, whose defeat at Newmarket last week does not affect his chance at Epsom. It requires a fair amount of stamina to get a mile and a half at Newmarket, and Polycrates does not stay the distance.

A mile and a quarter over the Surrey switchback does not impose nearly so great a strain.

Sir Eager and Florist have not been out this season, but they are not badly treated.

The pair I like best at the moment are Black Jester and Woodwild.

EARLY HOPE'S SUCCESS.

Don de Roca was a great favourite for the Derbyshire Plate on Saturday, as he was certain to be, but Early Hope was found in a winning mood. The East Clandon horse had run disappointingly at Nottingham; yet he was well backed at Derby, and got the better of Don de Roca by half a length. The odds betted on Flash of Steel in the Osmaston Plate were landed without "Pat" Huxley having to ride hard, but neither Sunbar, in the Chaddesden Plate, nor Search, in the Chatsworth Stakes, was fancied to beat respectively San Stefano and Rather Bolder and Yellow Jester.

SHE DARKENED HER GREY

A Society Lady Darkened Her Grey Hair and Stimulated Its Growth by a Simple Home Process.

She Tells How She Did It.

A well-known society lady who darkened her grey hair by a simple home process, made the following statement: "Any lady or gentleman can darken their grey or faded hair, stimulate its growth and make it soft and glossy with this simple recipe, which they can mix at home. To half-apint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, 1 small box of Orlex Compound and 4 oz. of glycerine. These ingredients can be purchased at any chemists at very little cost. Apply to the hair every other day until the grey hair is darkened sufficiently, then every two weeks. This mixture relieves scalp troubles and is excellent for dandruff and falling hair. It does not stain the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off. It will make a grey-haired person look 10 to 20 years younger."-Advt.

ABOUT YOUR DAUGHTER.

NO LONGER A CHILD.

Perhaps you have already noticed that your daughter in her "teens" has developed a fitful temper, is restless and excitable, and often in need of gentle reproof. In that case, remember that the march of years is leading her on to womanhood, and at this time a great responsibility rests upon you as parents.

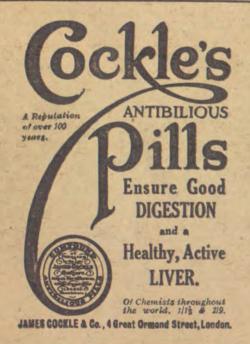

If your daughter is pale, complains of weakness and depression, feels tired out after a little exertion; if she tells you of headache or backache, or pain in the side, do not disregard these warnings. Your daughter needs help, for she is most probably anomies that is bloodless. anæmic-that is, bloodless.

"Chap called Chard. Not a Service man, but an awfully decent sort. No end of money and all that; manages the liuge Government electric thing at Cairo. Queer beggar in one way. Has a gorgeous house ont in the desert, and lives there alone pretty nearly always."

"Sort of hermit," Davencourt suggested.

"Oh, I dunno. Had some sort of worry over his marriage, I beheve. I dunno much about it. It all happened about 20 years ago, I believe, ages before my time. Chard's been out here since then. Scarcely ever goes home, though of course he could take pretty well as much leave as he liked. But he's a beggar to work. Hullo—"he broke off, and rose as a man came in wearing polo kit. "Lo, Chard," he said.

Savile introduced Davencourt. Richard nodded pleasantly, took the long drink the boy brought him, and sank into a lounge chair. "What a crowd out there!" he said, jerking his head towards the playing field.

A Voice Awakens Memories.

"There's a boat-load of girls come out for the season," Savile cried. "Chance of a lifetime for us, Chard!" he added with a boyish laugh.

Richard smiled absently. Under his tan the boy flushed scarlet as memory reminded him of his disclosure to Davencourt as to "some marriage worry." He glanced at Chard, but Richard's face was quite impressive. was quite impassive.
"I'm off," Savile announced. "Got to do my match."

Richard lay still for a while, looking at the flickering scene and thinking. His mind had received a queer jolt that had hurt. He had been galloping down the field, dribbling the ball beside him, when, to avoid an attack from Parry, the Blues' centre, he swerved out to his left, perilously near the railing. Then he passed the ball to Warren, who put it between the goal posts, and reined up for a moment.

who put it between the goal posts, and reined up for a moment.

"Oh, well driven indeed," he heard a voice say. That voice had given his memory the hard jolt. He turned his pony so suddenly that the game little beast reeled, and only saved himself by an ungainly spread of his slender legs.

Richard scanned the row of people on the green chairs close to him—two Army youths, an elderly man, three girls, and then more men. Whose voice had given him that extraordinary sense of pain? The girl in the centre of the three spoke again.

"Really, Hilda," she said, "do you mean you'll take me out into the desert?"

All the enthusiasm of youth was in her voice. She was pretty in an odd way. Her hair was pale gold, her eyes very dark brown, she was slender and rather pale.

"Muriel, I promise," one of the others answered with mock vehemence.

The game began again, and Richard rode away.

The game began again, and Richard rode away.
He had no idea why this girl should appeal to him. For the last ten years he had not cared whether women existed or not, he told himself scornfully, and before that he had only sought in his despair and bitter loneliness for friendship.

What a life his had been, he thought grimly. Left at twenty-three to live alone, for as long as his life should last! Mechanically he rode, parried, and shot, and all the while his brain worked on the old grievance.

his life should last! Mechanically he rode, parried, and shot, and all the while his brain worked on the old grievance.

Richard had returned to Marseilles on the pilot's boat after he saw Evie standing on the quay, paced the streets like a madman, searched every hotel register and haunted the public walks and gardens lest he should miss Evie. Yet he never saw her. He waited on, praying each morning that he might find her, acknowledging doggedly every night that he had failed.

Prosperous But Lonely.

He paid for his old weakness and selfishness during those long blaxing days and breathless, sleepless nights in Marseilles, but he had never seen his wife since she waved good-bye to him at the little hotel in Sheringham, where they were spending their honeymoon.

At first, when women in Egypt had been kind to him, he had tried to forget—tried to fall in love again, and failed. The loneliness of his life deepfenced, and he worked almost ferociously to escape from himself and his own misery. The contract was finished before time, and he was offered new work at a big salary. That also prospered, and then came the invitation to manage the next Government venture.

At the age of twenty-nine Richard became head the public walks and gardens the went about his work after the letter had been brosted with a sense of reluctance. Memories had haunted him since that night in the garden, memories of his marriage day, his engagement to Evie, her laugh, her tears. He became firitable and depressed, and sought relief by going into Cairo frequently and dining at the big hotel. It was the height of the season, and he received countless invitations. yourself."

From no one could he learn anything of Evie. She might be dead for all he knew. But he had Miss Carde's promise to write to him if Evie died, and he had had no letter from her.

Richard roused himself with an effort, and shouted for his boy, a Cairene, who appeared dressed in spotless white, with a flat scarlet cap. In a moment, in reply to his order, the purr of a big car was heard. Richard took the wheel himself, the car slid forward, and then gathered speed. His house was on the border of the desert.

As he drove through the crowded, clamorous

As he drove through the crowded, clamorous streets of Cairo many people waved to him, and many women lifted their sunshades to smile at him. Very few people knew Richard was married. At first Cairo had known, but the gossip had long since died down. So to-day Richard stood out as an interesting personality to the visitors and dwellers in Cairo. Yet he would have given all his income and prestige to be going back, on foot, or in a humble little cart, to someone who loved him, and waited for his coming with eager hands and line.

"Shall I Marry Again?"

His house came in sight at last, shining dazzlingly against the shimmering, golden background of the tinted clouds. A square, two-storied building, with the habitual flat roof, its walls were tinted the palest pink, and the entrance was framed in white marble. A huge courtyard ran round it, and half-enclosed a wonderful garden, for which Richard had gone to enormous expense.

He ran the car under the arch and up to the entrance. Two or three servants came out to welcome him and a dog barked for joy. Richard listlessly walked up the cool hall, with its perpetual fountain and exquisite mosaic floor, and idly snapped his fingers at a retriever which had run to meet him. to meet him.

Richard walked to his sunken Roman bath, another luxury which had cost a small fortune, and bathed. Then he dressed in a smoking suit and sat down to dinner. He ate and drank mechanically, waited on deftly by two men. There was sarcely a sound in the big room. At last he could bear the silence no longer. He pushed back his chair suddenly and rose. "Bring my coffee into the garden," he said abruptly, and went out with quick strides.

"It's all rotten." Richard flung out, as he paced up and down. "Life is almost a desert to me."

A thought which had often been in his mind of late returned. If he chose to apply to a court of law he could easily obtain freedom. Should he do so, and marry some woman for companionship?

do so, and marry some woman for companionship?
Only an old sentiment, a reluctant tenderness, held him back. Just a memory of a cornfield and a song called "The Garden of Sleep" held him back.

Richard Seeks His Freedom.

If he obtained his freedom a new life would be opened out for him. He could marry again. He could have children. The bitterness of his eyes changed to tenderness at that thought. The could have children. The bitterness of his eyes changed to tenderness at that thought. The idea of a small son of his own brought a lump into his throat. It would be life indeed to have a son to train and live with, to leave all his wealth to, and his power and name.

"I'll do it," he said aloud. "Yes, I'll do it."

Richard wrote to his solicitors next day, telling hem to send one of their clerks out to him for Sympathetic Shades.

Every woman, says a Mayfair expert in rest-gowns, "has her sympathetic colour. There are women, for instance, who want to scream when they find themselves in red, while there are others whom it revives and inspires.

"In southern countries strong bright colours are adopted in dress as a response to nature. The violent tones are in harmony with the surroundings and express the southern character. A Nervous Colour.

For nervous women I never prescribe red, or any material with a prominent design. For the unhappy I do not advise very light shades. Some people talk as though you have only to put a miserable woman into a flaming yellow gown to make her happy and brilliant at once. As a matter of fact, she would only be irritated by such treatment. WHY COTTON IS NOT DECLARED TO BE CONTRABAND, Sir John Simon Says The Blockade Fulfils The Purpose.

Sir John Simon does not think it necessary to declare that cotton is contraband in order to prevent supplies of that essential commodity reaching

In a letter to the secretary of the conference of chemists and engineers, who raised the question whether the action taken by the Government is adequate, the Attorney-General says:—

The steps which are being taken under the authority of the Order in Council are extremely effective to stop cotton from reaching Germany, and the declaration of cotton as contraband would not alter the result so far as preventing cotton reaching Germany is concerned in the very least. If an article is declared to be absolute contraband it can be stopped from going to a German port and can even be stopped from going to an adjoining neutral port if it is in course of transit through that neutral port to the enemy country.

These are exactly the cases in which under the Order in Council of March 11 any article can be stopped, whether it is contraband or not, and, of course, this Order in Council is being put into force in all proper cases.

To imagine that since that date anything can be gained so far as stopping the entrance of cotton into Germany is concerned by calling it contraband is in effect to suppose that a blockade is rendered more effective if you add that specified contraband articles will not be allowed to break the blockade. A blockade stops all articles, whether they are contraband or not, and therefore the addition would not have any practical consequence whatever.

What is true of Germany is, of course, equally

Alice Mary Wheatley, the twenty-two-year-old barmaid, who was also known as Marie Lanteri, was found guilty by the coroner's jury late on Saturday night of the wilful murder of Annie Josephine Wootten (30), wife of a lieutenant in the Bedfordshire Regiment, and was committed to take her trial on that charge at the Old Bailey. She was present in Court in charge of a wardress and warder, and frequently during the hearing sobbed bitterly, especially when her father gave evidence in reference to an old revolver which had been in the house for years past.

During the hearing Lieut. Wootten entered the Court, dressed in the uniform of his regiment, and was given a seat on the same form as the accused woman.

The father, Harry Wheatley, was the chief witness. He is a jobbing gardener, of Horsted, Sussex, and said his daughter had been sickly and ill all her life, and could do no hard work. She was frequently at home. She left home on March 16 or 18, saying she was going to London to see Lieut. Wootten.

Discontent has crept with the spring into the households of the war brides.

The builders are to blame. "We cannot get the labour," said one of them to the Daily Sketch.

"It is not our fault. Painters and decorators are scarce, and growing scarcer every day. Those that are available are snapped up at once for big jobs, and there are none left to hang wall paper and mend tiles in the little villas of suburbia.

"The only solution I see is that the master of the house will have to do his repairs and painting himself."

"But the master of the house is with his regiment," said a war-bride when this argument was put to her. "Is it fair to expect him to come home on leave to an unpainted and undecorated home, and start work on it with a pail of white-wash?

BEFORE THE MIRRO

By "JEANNETTE."

"Jeannette" the well-known writer on Beauty Culture and author of "The Book of Beauty," will be pleased to help and advise any reader on matters of the Toilet. Queries should be accompanied by a stamped addressed envelope and directed to "Jeannette," care of "Before the Mirror," 43, Gray's Inn Road, London, W.C.

These are, undoubtedly, days of exceptional nervous strain for one and all of us. Anxiety, with its beauty-destroying influence, is casting its shadow over the lives of many of us women, and while, perhaps, a few—the more stoical amongst us—can avoid worrying over past and prospective events, we may all, with a little care and forethought, succeed in preventing the results of worry from being noticeable in our appearance. To these fortunate few this little chat will, however, be as interesting and instructive as to those who stand in real need of help in toilet matters, and may be the means of bringing to their notice some hitherto unknown method of retaining or regaining that beauty of face and figure which is the birthright of every woman. Some of the ingredients mentioned below are, at present, not generally known to the public, but any good chemist will usually be found to have a small quantity in stock.

Wrinkies, and how to Remove Them—Worry, late hours, or the passing of old Father Time, may came those ugity tute lines which so detruct from the freshness and charm of a woman's face; but the cure is always the same. Feed the tissues beneath the skin, and massage them with a reliable skin food, which, while nourishing the fatty tissues, will not corson the skin, nor grow hairs upon the face, as so many inferior creams do. To remove the wrinkies, bathe the skin, nor grow hairs upon the face, as so many inferior creams do. To remove the wrinkies, bathe the skin, nor grow hairs upon the face, as so many inferior creams do. To remove the wrinkies, bathe the skin, nor grow hairs upon the face, as so many inferior creams do. To remove the neck, and, with the tips of the fingers, rub it gently into the pores, working in an upward and outward direction. Wipe off any superfluous wax, leaving a little on the skin all night. In the morning, wash off with warm water and Pilenta soap. The use of the wax not only teeds the skin but removes the dead, outer cuticle, to breathe and show itself.

Beautiful Hair—How to Shampoo. Whether the hair is luxuriant and glossy, or thin and lanky, depends very largely upon the care bestowed upon it. To keep the bair in good condition, it should be shampood once in every two or three weeks. Before shampood once in every two or three weeks. Before shampood once in every two or three weeks. quarter pound sealed packages; it keeps indefinitely, and one package contains sufficient for twenty-five or thirty shampoos.

The Question of Powder.—Powder should never be used by anyone with a tendency to wrinkle, for it fills up the lines on the face, and tends to deepen and accentuate the wrinkles. In the place of powder, get about one ounce of eleminite from any chemist, and dissolve it in four tablespoons of warm water, Place it in a bottle, and apply to the skin with the finger tips, allowing it to dry on the face. This gives the skin a soft, peach-like bloom, and prevents that unbecoming, greasy appearance which is the bane of so many a woman's life.

A Tonic for the Hair.—During the spring and early summer, the hair generally needs a little stimulant to its growth, in the form of a tonic. To make a simple and inexpensive one, at home, take four ounces of bay rum, and add to it one ounce of boranium. Shake thoroughly, and leave for thirty minutes, then strain, and add sufficient water to make half-a-pint. At night, massage the scalp for ten minutes, then dab the mixture into the roots with a soft sponge. Five minutes' brushing in the morning will be found beneficial in giving an added gloss to the hair.

A Little Colour to the Cheeks.—A slight dusting of colliandum rubbed over the cheeks imparts just that touch of colour which gives an added brilliancy to the eyes, and brightens the whole face. Colliandum, unlike ordinary rouge, is quite undetectable, and, as the colour deepens when the heat of the room increases, its use gives a perfectly natural appearance.

To Wave the Hair.—Hot irons, when employed to wave the hair, not only make it harsh and brittle, spoiling colour of fair or auburn hair, but induce a tendency towards greyness. To give a wave to straight hair, damp it with silmerine and either are quite pleasant to the taste, having a marked peppermint flavour.

To Restore Crey Hair to its Original Colour.—
Streaks of grey, whether in fair or dark hair, are always unbecoming, and prove a cruel tell-tale of age. It is not generally known that an ounce of tammalite, which can be bought at any chemist's, mixed with four ounces of bay rum, makes a most satisfactory louon for restoring grey hair to its natural colour. Apply the lotion night and morning with a soft toothbrush, and, after a few days, the hair will be found to be gradually returning to its original shade.

Superfluous Hair—Its Cause and Cure.—Superfluous hair is invariably the result of using inferior scap or bad face creams. To remove the hairs, apply a little powdered pheminol mixed to a paste with cold water, and applied to the skin with a bone knife. The skin should be dusted with powdered alum before applying the pheminol, and the paste removed after being left on for two minutes. This treatment is recommended not only to remove the growth temporarily, but to eventually kill the roots.

This war has settled the woman's question. There is no longer any need to argue: "What is woman's real place?" The mothers, wives and sweethearts of the soldiers in Great Britain, France, Russia and Belgium have upset all the speculations of the theorists by doing things. By deeds they have proved that their place is behind the men.

Not behind them as an inferior race, but as fighting supports in the great battle.
