'IT WAS GIVEN MY BROTHER BY A SOLDIER WHO WAS DYING'

Believed to have belonged to one of the Monmouthshires. The girl who sent this writes:—"It was given my brother by a soldier "The mother may identify her beautiful baby girl," writes the Card, found with five others, bears the name of a who was dying, and who asked my brother to tell the girl when he died. "Warwickshire who sent this. "Margaret Doreen Northampton photographer. "My brother himself has since been killed." Swaby, aged 71 months," is written on the picture.

Found in Belgium by one of the Royal A leather case picked up by a Royal Scot in the trenches in the Dardanelles. The man who sent Fusiliers. it is now reported missing.

Found in the trenches by one of the Gordon Highlanders.

These pathetic relics from the battlefield sent by our soldiers to the Daily Sketch are a silent testimony to the humanity of the British soldier. Amid the grim and ghastly business of war he thinks of those at home—and not only of his own folk, but the mothers, wives and sisters of his comrades.

TAXING WAR PROFITS.

F course, if we were a businesslike people there would be no war profits to tax. But as we are anything but practical in our methods of administration there are war profits and war profiteers. And the amusing thing is that we may end by taxing the wrong people. When we talk and think of war profits our mind goes and ammunition.

AT the back of many people's minds is the idea that it is an immoral business to make armaments; and the suggestion to tax war profits is eagerly supported, Queen Alexandra At Richmond. because it is believed that the great armament companies should be punished by heavy Richmond last week was a red letter day in the war correspondent, and a taxation for their crimes. In fact, it is often lives of some of the troops there. Her Majesty com-urged that they should be taxed out of manded Viscount Knollys to attend her, as his son strong man, but, fortunately, far from silent, as Mr. existence.

THIS is a most foolish theory. The armament firms are as essential to us as our Army and Navy. A glance at the Stock Exchange quotations will show, too, dent she directed a photographer who happened to The Maidenhead Murray's. that war does not much enhance the value of armament shares. In other words, the great firms regularly employed in making war munitions are not expected by the profithunting dividend seekers to make huge gains from the war. Their output will be greater, but the cost of night work, extra labour, special wages, and high prices of raw materials eat up the net profits. The man who wants big dividends for his investment will probably get a better yield from a tea-shop or a picture palace than from an armament firm in war time.

THE real profiteers by the war are the people who can never be got at by the tax collector. They are the little contractors and sub-contractors who by the most subterranean methods sell things to the War Office at prices which only the War Office would pay. Early in the war we had tales of fortunes being made by innumerable alien contractors in the East End. Our gentle guests quickly established "corners" in everything, and the way prices soared was a shocking revelation of the unbusinesslike methods of the authorities. We saw officers begging in the Agony Columns of the Times for charitable assistance to help them in equipping themselves, because the prices of clothing, swords, field-glasses, etc., had risen to such an extent that the men could not afford to buy them out of their official allowance!

WE can never trace the fellows who made so was the speech he made. profits out of all these things. Many of them are now flourishing under the friendly shade of the Bankruptcy Act, others of them are trading with new names in fresh Offley Rouse Wakeman, son of Sir Offley Wakeslow and clumsy to deal with them.

A POLOGISTS for the War Office will say that the poor officials there were busy with the war, and had no time to see that the nation's money was well spent. People forget that the one object of the War Office was to be prepared for war. It exists for nothing else. We make a great song about Is It A White Elephant? the wonderful work it did in sending an M.P.s say that the new tea-room, which was Army to France, in building wooden huts in mud swamps and in huving up hoots and mud swamps, and in buying up boots and Works will be asked why they made this room. Delysia to start with, and half a dozen or more clothes so expeditiously. We even profess The Committee did not ask of the clothes so expeditiously. We even profess the Committee did not ask of the clothes the clothes so expeditiously. We even profess the clothes so expeditions the clothes so expeditions the clothes are clothes as the clothes are clothes are clothes are clothes are clothes as the clothes are clot to be amazed that the War Office manages want it, and refuse, I hear, to take it over. to feed our soldiers in the field. But we have paid officials handsomely all these years Famous Socialist Returns. to train for cloing these things. That there has been appalling waste of money and Graham riding in the Row again, and looking for Hoey is at her loveliest and brainiest. Morris vaded by one of those miniature detachments of has been appalling waste of money and material is best proved now by the fact that the Government is preparing to tax was profits. If the authorities had worked on business lines there would have been no war profits to tax.

AS for the war profits on coal, food, and the other necessaries of the community, the process of exploitation is so cleverly worked and so complicated that taxing is but a very poor method of getting at the worst offenders. Prevention would have been far better than any curative process.

I WELL remember Princess Henry of Battenberg once failing to recognise her own son-the late Prince Maurice-when he was in uniform at Wellington College. It was speech day, and the late King had gone down specially for the event. After the Princess had been there some time she asked one of the masters where her son was. Prince Maurice was standing within arm's length of her, but being one of the Guard of Honour for the King he could not make himself known to his mohter.

THERE IS NO earthly reason why Murray's River Club shouldn't be an immense success, in spite of the war. Plenty of timid or captious people might object to visiting its parent in Beak-street on the strength that after all it is a night club, although, as most of us know, it is as decorously conducted as a vicarage drawing-room. But whatever can be wrong with having tea or dinner on the lawn at Bridge House, Maidenhead, in the pure country

A Charming Spot.

This is what I did on Saturday afternoon. Of course, the weather was divinely perfect, which added a lot to the success of my little jaunt to the town of punts and chorus girls, but Jack May really has made a charming spot out of that long-closed place opposite Skindle's. Bridge House was originally the abode of George Herring, and much of his fine old furniture remains. The house itself makes a comfy club, while the grounds contain a tennis lawn and a dancing floor.

Tea And Dinner.

I sar on the lawn and consumed strawberries while I listened to the twanging of banjos and watched the river-a sadly depleted river, by the way. Punts were few, and men to push them along still fewer. Most of those that there were wore khaki, and some punted with a "Sam Browne' belt on. Later on we dined-a lengthy and excellent business. You can have a table on the lawn if you like, but you will dine inside if you are wise.

Royalty And Others.

A KINDLY SOUL whisked me in a motor to Taplow station for the 8.30 train, and I was in the Empire before ten. So were the Grand Duke Michael and his daughters, who had been in a life George Graves was at a loss by reason of a little something that completely dried up one of I have fust heard of the tragic but gallant his scenes. I saw him two minutes later in his death, "somewhere in France," of Lieut. Edward dressing-room. He was sobbing like a child.

TALKING of the Empire reminds me that two of the principals—Lupino Lane, the agile, and Blanche Tomlin, the sweet-voiced—have been and gone and got engaged. Congratulations and felicitations to both!

Exit Janis And Hallam.

NEXT MONTH sees the following Royal anniver-saries:—July 6, anniversary of the marriage of the audience on such affectionate terms with its favourites as that which came to bid farewell to Elsie Janis and Basil Hallam. There was something more-I don't quite know what-about this occasion than a proof of vast popularity. The horror that is in the background of everything just now may have had something to do with it.

Fame And Deserved,

I DON'T THINK anyone will grudge the pair their moment of triumph. Elsie Janis since she first came to London has deserved her fame by sheer genius; Basil Hallam, the immaculate Gilbert, the "nut," but never the "silly ass," has done what he had to do perfectly and modestly.

In the words of his song, he has "chosen his ties and changed his kit " without a bit of side. Now he is severing many ties of another sort and changing his kit—for khaki. He knows all about nuts. He will soon be busy with shells.

Ir was an affecting scene, as the local papers say, when Elsie and Basil stood surrounded by flowers. Chorus girls mopped their eyes when Basil recited, very well indeed, a very serious little poem of Elsie's. And as for what happened at the stage door-well, I wonder they didn't call the "specials" out.

Wish Wynne.

Bur there is a consolation, and here she is —Wish Wynne, who comes to the Palace tonight. It will be her first appearance in revue, although on the "halls" she is a big star, and her brilliant work in "The Great Adventure ' showed that she can do great things in comedy too. So there is no donbt whatever that she will be successful in her new line. Wish Wynne is full of personality, and has a fine sense of character. I'm glad she will appear in, among other things, a little sketch by Philip O'Farrell, in which she is the plain and sensible wife of a conceited actor. I saw this at the Empire at a charity matinée a few months ago, and was immensely struck by it.

Our Dumb Friends.

"OUR DUMB FRIENDS' LEAGUE" fête in the Botanical Gardens, which took place on Friday and Saturday, was a thoroughly enjoyable affair. It can be pronounced a success, but there is no use blinking the fact that what was wanted was more menmen with money and the courage to spend as in the box the whole evening. For the first time in his good old days before the war. I looked in on the first day, and found fair young things as energetic and as importunate as ever. But they all made the same complaint. No men.

Old Nuts And Young Nuts.

Young nuts who would give a pretty girl a sovereign for a cup of tea are doing their duty, and getting slaughtered Ypres way. And the old nuts find that money is "tight." There were lots of wounded Tommies, and fine-looking old Chelsea pensioners, but you cannot badger them for money. However, Phyllis Monkman and her mother and sisters did well with a drink tent, Dorothy Forster sold lots of her own songs, and Lord and Lady Townshend were very busy at their

SOLDIERS BAKED ALIVE!

"Frightfulness" But Remarkable New "Cure" In London.

New "Cure" In London.

British soldiers are being baked alive—and this in London, too! Let us explain.

When a soldier patient from the front arrives at the London Hospital suffering from paralysis or rheumatism, he is placed in a bed to which is applied a system of radiant heat.

By the side of the bed is an apparatus similar to an electric heating radiator.

As the result of exposure in the trenches many a Tommy has fallen a victim to rheumatism, and some even to paralysis.

"Baking" is a new treatment, and it is said to be remarkably successful.

How the patients fare was shown in a series of fine pictures which appeared in yesterday's Hlustrated Sunday Herald—the week end paper with the best pictures.

In the Sunday Herald, too, there was, as usual, exclusive information of an interesting character. It was related, for instance, that ther is a likelihood of a new campaign being started against aliens in high quarters.

The ground is being prepared (said the writer), and, if my informants are to be believed—they are

Those who have deliberately schemed to make money out of the present situation deserve no more view of exceptional profits will make no complaint if some plan is devised to prevent them from receiving this unearned increment, or to take back for public purposes a considerable proportion of it.

FOUR GREAT TRADES.

Roughly speaking, there are four great trades which are making vast profits out of the war.

These are:—

the coalowners, the farmers, and the firms which are doing Government contracts.

In all these cases it would be possible for the Government to adopt methods which would make it less easy to make these profits.

In the case of ship-owners the action of the Government has actually been responsible for the enormous rates which shipowners have been able to get during the last few months. The chartering of vessels for transport work has lessened the number of ships available for ordinary trade, with

If so, the Daily Sketch will welcome your support of a scheme which should make the occasion long memorable.

All our readers are invited to become recruiters, and from to-day until Lord Kitchener's birthday to devote their energies to finding "Kitchener's Birthday Recruits."

By Philip Snowden, M.P.

There is something utterly repugnant in the spectacle of private persons making the spectacle of the spectacle of private persons making the spectacle of the spectacle of private persons making the spectacle of the spectacle of the war. This is a time when great sacrifices are being made, both in life and wealth, by all classes. Deliberately to take advantage of this national crisis in order to put money into petition.

one's pocket is as callous and inhuman as to strip the body of a dead soldier.

But it must in justice be said that not all the people who are gaining financially by the war are doing so by deliberate scheming and intention. The shareholders in commercial concerns which are profiting from the war are in the position of having riches thrust upon them without any effect or dead of the position of having riches thrust upon them without any effect or dead of the profit of the process of the price of British wheat, and also and barley at least. Board as it will be to fix wages by a Board, which Mr. Lloyd George is going to propose on Wednesday.

But a good deal of mischief has already seen done. What requires to be done now is to do all that is possible to prevent war profits from being made, and to devise some scheme for getting back as much as possible of the profit which has already been made.

Notwithstanding the objection of the Treasury, I am still of opinion that the best way to reach the war profits is by requiring from every firm a declaration of its profits since the outbreak of war, and a comparison of these profits with the corresponding period of the three previous years.

Unless it can be shown that the increase is due to other causes, such as the return on additional capital, it must be assumed that the increase, where an increase is shown, is due to the war. This increase should bear a special rate of taxation, which will secure practically the whole excess for the State.

whole excess for the State.

UNBUSINESSLIKE FARMERS.

There may be a difficulty with the farmers. Some of them have been making fortunes. Under the present Income-tax law the farmer whose rent is below £480 a year does not pay one penny of income-tax, though he makes a thousand a year or more. It is said farmers do not keep accounts, and their profits are not ascertainable. Well, they must suffer for their want of business management, and they must pay income-tax upon a fair estimate of what their profits are.

If the facts about War Profits were fully known to the public the popular demand known to the public the popular demand for the special taxation of such profits, strong as it is now, would be overwhelm-

The instinct of fair-dealing, the financial necessities of the nation, the sense of justice, all combine to make the demand for the appropriation of war profits by the State one which must be met

The hours are now critical in the North of France. The French have hemmed in one of the German armies, numbering 150,000 men, on a front between four and five miles wide between Souchez, Notre Dame de Lette, Carency, and Neuville St. Vaast-the region south of La Bassée, where the fate of Lens is being decided.

They have broken through the German line near Souchez and hold the ground beyond, in spite of repeated German efforts to dislodge them.

Meanwhile the British troops hold large masses of German troops and heavy artillery on the front between La Bassée and Ypres and are making a continuous series of vigorous local Battle In Sight.

NORTHERN FRANCE, Sunday.
The French have taken the Fond de Buval, or "Hell's Mouth," as the "Poilus" (French Tommies) have learned to call it, and are swarming up the rugged slopes of Hill No. 119.
This means that a complete and decisive victory in the battle in Artois (north of Arras), which has been in progress since May 9, is within sight.
The Fond de Buval, a sheltered ravine in the south-east flank of Notre Dame de Lorette, is a natural stronghold, where an important force of the enemy, well dug in, resisted for six weeks all attempts to dislodge them and enfiladed the French advance at this point towards Souchez.
The ground bristled with subterranean forts, redoubts and hidden machine-guns. It was found necessary to invest the ravine on three sides, after which an avalanche of metal from the French artillery partially demolished the defences and prepared the way for the final assault

German Official News.

Berlin (via Amsterdam), Sunday.

The armies of General Mackensen have captured the Grodek positions.

Yesterday morning German troops and a corps and the Ostarian Lieutenant Field Marshal von Arz, began to attack the strongly fortified hostile lines.

After obstinate fighting on a front of miles, the enemy trenches, lying one behind the other, were stormed in the afternoon. In the evening the enemy was repulsed behind the great road between Zolkiew, north of Lemberg, and Rawaruska.

FOUGHT WITH THE FEROCITY OF RATS.

A long and sanguinary struggle ensued. The French attacked simultaneously from two sides, and pressed forward until their forces converged. The Germans, with their escape cut off, fought with the ferocity of rats in a corner.

Owing to the steadily narrowing area of the combat the fire of their machine-guns wiped out many of their own men. In places they actually took cover behind piles of their own dead, contesting every foot of the ground.

When the ravine was finally carried only a score of prisoners could be collected—all that remained of the defenders.

The foothold obtained by the French on Hill No. 119 constitutes a further menace to Souchez, and also to Givenchy-en-Gohelle (north-east of Souchez).

also to Givenchy-en-Gohelle (north-east of Souchez).

SIGNIFICANT GERMAN FAILURE.

It is reported that the French have shelled the latter place, where important forces of the enemy are concentrated.

The significance of the irresistible French advance between Souchez and Neuville is to be found in the fact that the Germans are said to have brought over 100,000 men from Belgium, and nearly 300 heavy guns, to reinforce their army in Northern France, and have yet been unsuccessful in their attempts to prevent the forward march of their adversaries.

Prisoners taken recently have cried with joy at the relief from what they describe as a nightmare. Several have died from nervous exhaustion.

Further slight progress was made yesterday afternoon by the British to the north of Hooge.—Central News Special Correspondent.

Details are coming to hand with reference to the magnificent action of the Italian Alpine troops on Monte Nero, says an official note from Rome yester-

The Alpini were armed with rifle, bayonet and hand-grenades They climbed the rocks bare-footed in the night, maintaining perfect silence, and reached the trenches without warning. They leapt into them and overwhelmed two companies of the enemy, after which they jumped into the second line trenches and crushed two other enemy companies.

ARMOURED CARS IN ACTION.

THE DARDANELLES, June 6.

Punctually at twelve the order to go forward was given, and the men in the first line of trenches leapt out, and dashed across the inter-

Dazed and deafened by the avalanche of shell-fire which preceded the assault, the Turks fired a shot or two at the men stabbing down at them, and then fied to the rear trenches.

THE TURKS ON THE RUN

Our second line, dashing forward under a hot fire, captured the enemy's second line. The Turks, being fairly on the run, our men followed up their advantage wherever they can d, which was chiefly in the centre.

They captured line after line of translage till.

They captured line after line of trenches till, early in the afternoon, the centre held the fifth Turkish trench line.

Another weapon had been brought into play—the armoured turret motor-cars of the Royal Naval Air Service.

When we landed nothing worthy the name of a road existed. Two tolerable tracks leading from Seddul Bahr and Cape Helles to Krithia had been made into something like roads for transport by our

At noon the cars, four on each road, dashed up to the firing line. Crossing our trenches on bridges laid across for them they went on, jolting and rocking over the pitfalls sown in the ground, clean up to the enemy's trenches.

Further progress was impossible, and the cars halted and opened fire with their maxims on the Turks fleeing from the first trenches to the rear.

THE ENEMY'S SURPRISE.

As soon as the Turks had recovered from their surprise at the appearance of this new enemy builtes began to ping against the armoured sides of the cars and shells began to fall.

Our men being now well in advance of the cars, the latter withdrew, One car was hit and the top of its turret knocked off, but nobody was killed.

The quick success of our centre had carried our line here six hundred to a thousand yards forward. On the right the French, stopped by the formidable barrier of the Kereves Dere gully, were unable to make similar progress.

The Royal Naval Division found itself unable to maintain the ground won, as it would have meant leaving a gap between them and the French. The Division fought with the utmost bravery. On our left flank Gurkhas and Sikhs were unable to get through the very strong barbed-wire defences.

When the work closed for the day our line showed a strong salient in the centre, which it must be the work of other days to straighten out.

One prize of the day had been the largest bag of Turkish prisoners we had yet secured.

On Sunday morning at dawn the Turks launched their counter-attack with great vigour.

Our men were very hard pressed, at had to abandon two of their conquered trenches, which were afterwards reconquered by the hardest fighting. In the end the enemy was repulsed with great loss.

Fighting still continues. Our Army has the situation well in hand, and can keep the Turks fully occupied until it judges the meent ripe for a further blow.—Reuter's Special.

AN OPTIMISTIC ARCHDUKE.

Among prisoners recently taken by the Italians are some young Austrian officers attached to the headquarters of the Archduke Eugene which only recently reached the front.

They say they are quite confident that their captivity will only be short, as the Archduke has assured his officers that they will spend Christmas in Venice and Milan.—Reuter.

HERO OF THE AIR.

Flight-Commander Borton, of the Black Watch and Royal Flying Corps, is the hero of one of Eye-Witness's recent stories of our flying men at the front. When 20 miles from the British lines he was shot through the jaw and neck. Quickly recovering from the shock, he regained control of his machine and, though weak through loss of blood, safely reached the Allied lines with his observer.

100 YEARS AFTER.

Sir J. French's Waterloo Centenary Review Of Life Guards.

DASTARDLY GERMAN METHODS.

The long-expected general assault on the Turkish trenches in front of Achi aba began on Commander's High Tribute To Men Who Faced Poison Fumes.

By Percival Phillips.

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS, Friday. A hundred years after Waterloo, almost to the minute, British Life Guards were again massed within sound of French guns as part of a British army in the field, fighting again for the freedom of Europe.

It seemed peculiarly appropriate that Sir John French should select this date for his meeting with the Household Cavalry in order to thank them for their fine resistance during the second battle of Ypres.

Many of the men who witnessed the simple ceremony thought of the contrast with that other June morning a century ago, when the King's troops were gathered on the plain of Flanders to oppose the hosts of the fallen Emperor.

The Field-Marshal visited three contingents of troops concerned in the struggle to hold the Ypres salient, and the first of these included the Life Guards.

He found them in an ordinary pasture beside a country road, with a grey transport wagon set in the centre as an impromptu platform, a wooden ladder giving access thereto

MODEST SIR JOHN.

Sir John ignored these preparations for oratory, and talked to his troops from their own level beside a temporary staff which flew the Union Jack.

A group of generals met the Field-Marshal, and he walked slowly with them along the lines of troops, halting to shake hands with commanding officers and scrutinising each figure in khaki keenly as he passed.

as he passed.
You would not have known them for Life Guards.
Gone were the plumes, the glittering breast-plates, the tight breeches, the formidable top boots—gone, too, the horses, the jingle of polished accourrements, the imposing swagger of the Household cavalryman.
Remained instead straight rows of foot soldiers looking like ordinary infantry of the line save that most of them were taller, heavier men—dressed in worn khaki, with only the metal initials "L. G." on their cloth shoulder straps to show their identity.
Their faces were the faces of men who had seen death and were not afraid.

ALL DESERVE THE V.C.

They have performed feats of heroism that are almost incredible, but you cannot drag the details from them. Someone had said that "every man of them deserves the Victoria Cross!" but nowhere in the theatre of war will you find more modest, unotherwise heroes.

the theatre of war will you find more modest, unobtrusive heroes.

Every clear-cut word of the Commander-in-Chief's little speech of thanks could be heard by the farthermost men. He spoke slowly, in measured sentences punctuated by the distant guns, turning first to one side and then the other of the broken square. There was no attempt at eloquence.

Sir John French uses simple, soldierly language, looking the while at the men he is addressing, and the same words might be said to one man in private or to a thousand in an open field.

He walked about occasionally as he talked, sometimes leaning on his walking-stick, sometimes thrusting it under his arm and standing for a moment with hands clasped at his belt, occasionally thrusting it into the grass to emphasise a word.

He was a striking figure under the fluttering Union Jack, giving the impression of great virility and strength, despite the snow-white moustache drooping over the firm mouth.

IN A VERY HOT CORNER.

Sir John French, in the course of his speech (reported by Reuter) said :--

You were placed in a very hot corner, where, owing to the continuous shelling by the enemy, it was impossible to secure adequate cover. By your steadfast bearing in that terrible position you have all, every regiment, added fresh lustre and still greater honour to the magnificent records you already possess. This is what I want you to remember when you think of the losses you suffered.

You had some terrible experiences up there, but every regiment has covered its banner with distinction and glory. This record I am sure you will maintain throughout the campaign, in whatever sphere of action you may be engaged.

TAKEN WITHOUT WARNING.

Sir John then referred to what he could only describe as the "dastardly gas attacks" by the Germans at Ypres.

The gas came without any warning to the troops in this region, and many dropped dead on the spot. It was impossible to see anything, owing to the darkness, which was rendered still more opaque by the asphyxiating fumes.

In these circumstances a certain amount of confusion was unavoidable, but the manner in which the men behaved and the quickness with which they recovered were superb. It was impossible to speak too highly of their conduct.

The magnificent stand they made and the work they did in filling the gap—also accomplished in the face of a wall of gas, miles long and yards high—could not be too highly praised.

There is too much suffering among elderly people with achy backs, stiff limbs, distressing kidney weakness, gravel, stone and dropsy. The kidneys are too weak to throw off the uric acid poison that causes these symptoms. NATIONAL CRUSADE AGAINST THE FLY PERIL.

New Preparation which supersedes the insanitary Methods usually adopted.

A NATIONAL CRUSADE.

The fly peril is a national one. A national crusade has therefore been inaugurated to fight it. A remarkable new antiseptic preparation which kills Flies, Wasps, Gnats, etc., has been evolved. So great is the efficiency of this scientific preparation, that it has been decided to make it the lever for a national movement.

The whole medical profession has constantly warned the public that this year there is every likelihood of a plague of flies. Frequently there have been references in the Press, inspired by official sources, to the effect that in consequence of the War and its dread results there is certain to be an abundance of flies. People are warned to burn rubbish, use covered dustbins, and besides destroy-ing every possible breeding place to keep all food covered, to disinfect and ventilate the interiors of dwellings.

Professor Lefroy, the originator of the housefly exhibition at the London Zoological Gardens, re-cently said: "There is already evidence from the Continent of a great increase of flies in the war area. If cholera breaks out in Serbia or Austria it may spread in fly-infested areas and get widely diffused. Already we have been visited by Army doctors anxious quickly to get all the facts about

THE HARBINGER OF DISEASE.

HOW THE FLY SPREADS CONTA

Much has been said about the fly and its evil habits, but too much cannot be said. It flies from rubbish heap to rubbish heap, from decaying offal and meat; it covers its foot pads and hairy limbs with every imaginable form of filth and disease germ. From rubbish heap it flies to food, and it is a common sight to see a fly prowling round a sugar bowl, jam dish, joint of meat, or drowned in a bowl of milk, In this way millions of germs are scattered broadcast.

WHAT SAN-FLY IS.

San-Fly is harmless. There is no trouble on stickiness with San-Fly. You simply dissolve a little San-Fly, and it not only kills the flies, but the germs of disease are rendered innocuous. It can be used as a powder and sprinkled on breeding places, cracks in the floor, in dustbins or rubbish heaps. It can be dissolved in water and used as a spray, or muslin can be soaked in it and hung across doors, windows, etc. If used as a spray, it purifies and freshens the air; poured down sinks and drains it eliminates every risk of flies breeding and congregating.

NO OBJECTIONABLE SIGHTS WITH SAN-FLY.

No objectionable sights with san-fly.

No more fly-traps. No more insanitary fly-papers or tapes. Fly-papers, traps and tapes should be condemned, because the flies gradually die, their bodies decompose, putrifying the atmosphere, and spread more infections than the pests themselves. San-fly is antiseptic, and not only kills the flies, but the germs they carry with them.

Do not bother with traps. Do not get heated chasing flies with patent "guns," which result in a ghastly and trivial, but exceedingly insanitary, cargo of smashed bodies. Adopt the only sensible, rational and scientific method of extermination, and send for a packet of San-Fly. Remember that one fly may be the forerunner of thousands of others, and if killed now incalculable benefit will be conferred on the community.

San-fly is obtainable direct from the Anti-Fly League in packets at 1s. 2d., 3 for 2s. 9d., or 8 for 5s. 3d., all post free. Address your letters to

POISON GAS AVENGED WITH BAYONETS.

How British Retook Trenches Lost At Hooge.

MEN NOTHING COULD STOP.

Terrorised Huns Unable To Flee Whine For Mercy.

Et., this morning in the neighbourhood of Ypres we successfully attacked the enemy's position north of Hooge. We occupied the whole of his first-line trenches on a front of 1,000 yards, and also parts of his second line.

In these few words Sir John French told a story of a great achievement on the part of the ployment of women in such departments as the British forces who wrested from the Germans Local Government Board, the Home Office, and "The attack was prepared by the stillery, and while the bombardment lasted it was absolutely murderous. Our men poured out high explosive shells and shrapnel by the hundreds and the whole earth seemed to be in eruption, made worse by the reply of the German guns.

AMAZING DARE-DEVILLY.

"Our fire trench was not more than 80 yards from the first German trench, and our men, who practically anticipated the order to advance, swarmed over the parapets with the utmost keanness. Their daredevitry was amaxing. Later, I saw our O.C. being helped away blinded with blood, but he would not leave the fight until he was practically compelled. "From the first the Germans, when they found that their machine-gun fire availed them nothing, turned round and ran, and in their frantic hasta wounded and dying alike were trampled underfoot. "The force of the British artillery was such that the German trenches became mere shambles, and in places only glimpses of grey cloth showed through the masses of shattered sandbags. "A dense pall of greyish black smoke overhung the scene, and choking fumes mingled with the sickly blood smell."

with the sickly blood smell.

"CHARGED INTO THE TEETH OF HELLS"

"There could be nothing finer than this attack of our infantry as led by the officers. They charged stubbornly and steadily right into the teeth of hell—machine gua and rifle fire—with the sole unanimous desire 'to get at it."

"There were mighly explosions as the big guns aent shells over the whole area. Many of our fellows had their heads blown clean off, and others were simply smashed to red fragments.

"The slaughter of Germans was tremendous, and their losses far exceeded ours. There were dug outs in their trenches full of smashed remains, and we had lo make our victorious way over hundreds of their dead and dying.

"Our fellows got in some useful work with the bayonet, and all round you could hear them and see them running. I have made a note of some of their exclamations 'Mercy, mercy, plenty good England,' cried one, and another yelled, 'No kill me. Me not want to fight. Kaiser make us; while 'They came like devils all' was the sullen tribute of one of the captured Germans."

ABJECT PRISONERS.

of one of the captured Germans."

ABJECT PRISONERS.

Mr. Fyle was wounded in this great attack on the German trenches, being struck in the leg by a bullet, but he managed to dash a turther hundred yards, though falling twice on the way. Then numbness began to affect his leg, but in spite of this he crawled back to the first trench he and his comrades had taken.

Subsequently he had charge of four German prisoners, and, to use his own words: "I made them sit in a row on the ground just in front of their own trench. One was a sub-lieutenant of the Prussian Guard, a massive fellow, who, although untouched, was trembling like a child.

"They could speak but little English, but I made them understand Not one of them moved. Amongst other prisoners were Bavarians and Saxons—old men and young men—and one of them told me that troops leaving Berlin were crying as they left."

In the midst of the fighting Mr. Fyfe lost sight of one of his "pals." Herbert Cooper, and he would be glad to hear if anyone has news of him.

LARGE GOLD WITHDRAWALS.

Owing to the necessity of paying for imports which in ordinary times would be satisfied by an exchange of credits the Bank of England is compelled to part with large amounts of gold.

On Saturday there was a further withdrawal of 2554,000 on American account, and £634,000 had to be set aside for Argentina. Thus since Wednesday last the Bank of England has lost as much as £2,608,000 in gold, or over 51 millions within ten days.

PATRONAGE "SCANDAL,"

Influence Getting Inefficient Girls Government Posts.

SELECTION BY BRAINS NEEDED.

Girls are being placed in Government offices in posts for which they are not fitted. Properly qualified girls are unable to obtain posts because the inefficient have friends with posts bec

These are two counts in an indictment made to the Daily Sketch by Miss Reta Oldham, president of the Association of Headmistresses.

A recent conference, at which Miss Oldham was a speaker, passed a strongly-worded resolution urging the Government to consider the em-strongly-held trenches which had been previously won from us by the use of poisonous gases.

Some of the men who took part in the great bayonet charge a few days ago are now in hospital at home, and one of them. Private F. A. Fyfe-formerly a member of the Daily Sketch staff-gives a vivid description of the fight.

"We had," he says, "to attack the German trenches at Hooge which they recently captured by the use of gases, and when we passed over the ground some of our victims were still lying there.

"In the afternoon we set off from the camp, and, reaching Ypres, marched silent'y to the point of reaching Ypres, marched silent'y to the point of the fight.

"In the afternoon we set off from the camp, and, reaching Ypres, marched silent'y to the point of the fight.

"The trouble is, she contends, that the old scandal of patronage and influence securing Government appointments for men is spreading to the gift of places to girls.

"What we who are interested in the welfare of the girls of the nation have to face," Miss Oldham said yesteriay. "Unfortunately, it is sometimes only too true. The girl may have no particular aptitude for the work she will be called upon to perform. But she has some relative or friend in the Civil Service, and through his influence she is accepted for the post. When she has to submit to the test of the work set before her, she proves to be practically useless.

"On the other hand, the girl who could do the work very often cannot get it to do. When the responsible official is approached on her behalf the answer is, 'We have so many applications before us already And, really, you know, the g.rls we have already are of so little use that we don't see the value of engaging any more.

"It has all arisen out of the unfortunate experiences the department has had of employing the wrong kind of girl."

"What, then," the Daily Sketch asked, "do you suggest as a remedy?"

"Let the Government partments consult the heads of the schools and those who are in touch with girls generally," Miss Oldham replied.

WARTIME CLUBS FOR GIRLS.

Hon. Emily Kinnaird Appeals To Daily Sketch Readers.

The Hon. Emily Kinnaird, who, with other ladies, working so enthusiastically for the interests of rls in military centres, writes to the Daily Sketch follows:

as follows:—
May I follow up the interest created in the Newhaven Girls' Wartime Hut by the pictures of its members and their friends in the Daily Sketch by an invitation to the girls of Sussex, who may be readers of your paper, to co-operate with our Central Committee in the formation of similar clubs in other williary contrast.

Committee in the formation of similar clubs in other military centres?

A conference is to be presided over on Wednesday at two o'clock, in Lewes, by the Countess of Chichester, and addressed by the Hon. Lady Cunliffe and Lady Proctor (chairman of the Y.W.C.A. Central Commitee for promoting patriotic clubs among girls in military centres), supported by Lady Brassey and others.

At this conference we hope to discuss ways and means of starting new clubs, but it is to the girls themselves we appeal. Our nation needs their best service, our country needs a new standard of friendship and companionship; in this time of sorrow and anxiety we all need the inspiration of the highest ideal, and to be sustained by the spiritual impulse which it is the chief design of these clubs to foster.

DYING BRITISH HERO'S LAST

Message For Girl To Whom Portrait Is The Only Clue.

SAD BATTLEFIELD RELICS.

No newspaper office has, we believe, received more photographs picked up on the battlefield, and other relies recovered after fierce fighting, than the Daily Sketch. And the reproduction of many of these who to reach her led to the establishment. many of those photographs has led to the establishment of the identity of the brave Tommies to whom they originally belonged, and in a good many cases has brought the news that their soldier owners are safe and well.

Two pages of to day's sue of the Daily Stetch are devoted to picture of this kind which were recently found at the front. These photographs, it might be mentioned, are but a small selection of those sent. Others will be published later, but many are too faded or have been picked up in too damaged a condition to be reproduced

THE SOLDIER'S PRAYER-BOOK.

THE SOLDIER'S PRAYER-BOOK.

The relics, other than photographs, which have reached the Daily Stetch and await the claims of owners or relatives include a watch-case, bearing the initials "W. P..." and filled with miniature photographs. This is believed to have belonged to a man of the Lincolns.

A prayer-book which comeone must greatly value has come to us from a private in the first Canadian contingent, who recovered it in the trenches. The fly-leaf bears the inscription:—

Married at Bath Somerset, in Christ Church.

Married at Bath Somerset, in Christ Church, 16th January, 1915, after knowing Phyllis since a small girl.—H. A. Shaw
Another book—a waistcoat pocket-book—found at Ypres, contained in one of its pockets several small photographs in metal cases, and on one page the entry "C. Sturdy, Llanrwst, North Wales."

"DIED BEFORE HE COULD GIVE HER N. ME.

One of the saddest of the many sad stories of the war surrounds the p cture of a young woman, with a baby on her lap, which appears on the front page. It is simply told in the following passage from a letter which accompanies the photograph:

I am sending this photo, which my brother sent home from France. It was given him by a soldier who was dying, and who asked him to write and tell the girl when he was dead; but he died before he could give the name and address.

My brother has also been killed, and we cannot find out who the soldier was.

We hope you will publish this, so that the girl will ret the soldier's last message.

The miniature sather case containing the charming portraits of a mother and her two children was found in a trench at the Dardanelles. The finder belonged to the 5th Royal Scots, and the Darly Sketch hears with regret from his mother, Mrs. A. Reynolds, of Stewart-terrace, F inburgh, that shortly after he had sent it he was reported missing.

PHOTOGRAPHS FOUND IN A BIBLE.

The photograph of two little girls sitting on a bench was, with another portrait of a young girl and a baby sitting on a doorstep, found between the leaves of a Bible at Ypres. The finder, a corporal in the Royal Irish Fusiliers, is carrying the Bible with him until its owner or his representative claims it.

The tory photograph of a member of the Royal sentative claims it.

The torn photograph of a member of the Royal Flying Corps was sent by a soldier of the Royal Scots Greys, who believes it belonged to an aviating colleague who was killed. In his letter he states that the machine was travelling at a height of about two thousand feet when the motor exploded and both the pilot and the observer were dashed to the ground and instantly killed.

The picture of one of the ladies appearing on the back page was picked up in a cellar at St. Jean, while that of the nurse was in an officer's writing-pad found in the trenches.

MILITARY ATHLETICS.

Keen Contests In Regimental Sports At Caterham.

An athletic meeting, in which the competitors were drawn from the Grenadier Guards, Coldstream Guards, Scots Guards, Irish Guards, Welsh Guards, 17th (S) Battalion Royal Fusiliers, and 16th (S) Battalion Middlesex Regiment, took place at Caterham, on Saturday, and produced some capital spect.

Private S. Andre (Cold-reamers) was first. Corporal H. G. Baldwin (17th Royal Fusiliers) second, and Lance-Corporal F. R. Skeeles (17th Royal Fusiliers) third in the quarter-mile race, which Andre won by three yards in 57sec. Skeeles, who is a Surrey Athletic Clobman and Gronville Harrier, won the half-mile by three yards from Private A. Robehaw, of the Greender Guards, in 2min. 7 4-5sec, and Private J. Gamble, of the Irish Guards won the mile race, with a fast finish, by five yards, in 4min. 41 3-5sec.

It was in the three miles race that Robshaw was seen at his best. Running with perioci judgment, he out-aprinted the well-known Ranelagh Harrier, Quartermaster Serret. E. E. Haselum (16th Middlesex), in the last lap, and best the latter by 30 yards in 16min 13 1-5sec. The high jump was won, at 5ft. 4in., by Corporal M. Balley (16th Middlesex).

PANY RACE AT ALDERSHOT.

RIVER CHARITY CARNIVAL.

The Middlesex Wanderers Association Football Club on Saturday held a water carnival, whi h proved to be the event of the season now that the Thames is without any of its usual regattas. Most of the events were of a military nature. On land 160 ladies can-vassed for contributions to local hospitals.

What The Beauty Expert Says.

Smooth Hands Even During War Work.

ONE might imagine that the ritual necessary "half-moons" are plainly visible. This part of now known to every woman, but I have had so ragged "hang-nails" will be the result.

their hands, and neglect other beauty rites, just because they find it easy and comfortable to attend to their hands, while such things as hair-brushing or throat massage bore them. The result is that they are over-manicured, which is almost as bad style as not to be manicured

The first point in the manicure ritual is to get the hands absolutely clean. Get a fairly hot lather and rub the hands well with a piece of towelling or flannel. It is a common mistake to scrub the hands with a nail-brush, but this means subsequent roughness for a tender skin, and a rough ckin is one that is always dirty.

For Satin-Smoothness.

To keep the hands satin - smooth always finish the washing by a douche of cold water and dry them perfectly. Rub them together after the towelling to make sure that they are dry and smooth-otherwise they will roughen, even in warm weather.

A slice of lemon will take off stains of all kinds, but when fingers are stained with fruit they should be held in cold water before the regular washing. Get into the habit of pushing the skin away from the base of each nail every time you wash your hands, and if your tinger-tips are blunt press them to encourage tapering. These actions soon become as mechanical as the actual drying, and in time make great improvement in the shape and condition of the finger-nails.

In order that the scheme should appeal to exhibition. every needlewoman thirty-three classes have been arranged. Each competitor may therefore send the type of work in which she is most proficient. One class is for children only, others have been arranged for those who are unable to afford a big outlay on materials.

There is no entrance fee in connection with this competition, but each entry must be accomthis competition, but each entry must be accompanied by 24 coupons cut from the Daily Sketch.

These coupons will appear in each issue from April 12 to November 6 inclusive. More than one entry may be sent by any competitor, provided that each entry is accompanied by the correct number of coupons.

After the judging (which is to be done by experts from the Royal School of Art Needlework) the work will be exhibited in a suitable hall in London, but will not be sold unless at the owner's wish. Proceeds of the exhibition and of the sale state of classes.

Sketch, London, E.C. The envelope will be returned containing an entrance form, with full particular and rules.

A list of the thirty-three classes appears below. One of them, at least, is sure to appeal to every woman who is mistress of her needle and wants to make her favourite hobby worth while.

In response to an inquiry it may be here pointed out that the prizes mentioned below will be awarded in each of the classes above which they appear, and are not merely allotted to the entire set of classes.

THE Daily Sketch is offering £1,000 in prizes of such work as the owners wish to put to patriotic for the best pieces of needlework done by purpose will be handed to the British Red Cross Society and the St. John Ambulance Association, but those who are unable to give their work may have it returned to them at the close of the

It is, of course, hoped that all who can do so will still surrender their entries, as it is hoped to raise a substantial sum by the exhibition and sale at the beginning of December next.

Checked taffeta used very successfully conjunction with muslin, and high-waisted little taffeta and highskirts of all colours are buttoned on to tiny blouses of white muslin by large pearl buttons and often have shoulderstraps as well. Exquisite little slips of white taffeta, piped and scalloped, are also being made for the smart little girl who is still far off her teens.

That last point is one to remember, for it is only the very young girl who can be success-fully "dressed-up" in taffeta or anything else. The older she gets the simpler her clothes must become in material and design.

Since the long-waisted fashion has been adopted by mothers (and even by grandmothers) it is no longer so much seen in the smarter frocks for little girls. Instead there is a tendency for the waist-line to rise almost as far as it may go. Short puff sleeves are also being revived on the little muslin frocks for the hot days of 1915.

You created a veritable reign of terror. And here we've been searching for you high and low to restore what we regard as your property."

"It is not true," the woman said. "The White Mone was given to my mother by the late Rajah Sinji just before he died, and it was stolen by a perindious friend who was in league with you med others. The thief did not live long to enjoy his share of the money. But we need not trouble about him. "The blackmail was necessary," the woman went on. "Nina Din had very little money, and you must understand that the campaign was a costly one. And that was all planned by me. Those seed pearls came from the scabbard of the sacred sword—it was the little touch of romance which I knew would appeal to you, knowing the East as you do I make no apology, I express no regrets. It is only wasted time and energy that I am sorry for. You admit that the White Mouse is mine—I held it in trust for a nation. And now give me the gem and let me go. When Nana Din is fit to be moved—"

"You need not trouble about that," St. Julien explained. "Your lover can stay here as long as he pleases. I have no doubt that you know where my servants are to be found, and, if you will intimate to them that the siege is raised, so to speak, I shall be glad to have them back again. "Is lost," St. Julien said. "Now listen."

It was in a few words that St. Julien explained. The conspirators had overreached themselves, and until St. Julien recovered his sight there was but little chance of the White Mouse being seen again.

"You see," he concluded, "it might still be possible to do something if my chauffeur had not vanished. He would be able to locate the spot where he set me down and show you the path leading through the woods. I could not have gone more than 200 yards before I knew I was being followed. I slipped behind a holly bush on the right, and the tree where I hid the sword-hilt is close by. But, seeing that the chauffeur—"

London, 1900, 1906 and Mothers are continually writing to us about what Neave's Food has done for their babies when other Foods have failed to suit.—Mrs. Graddon, writing from 11, Derby Road, Sefton Park, Bristol, on July 23rd, 1912, says:—"I am sending you the photo of our little boy, Teddy, aged 18 months. From birth to three months we fed him on a Food which he was always throwing up. We tried several other Foods with the same result, and, having lost two children before, it made us very anxious. Then we were advised to try Neave's Food, and almost at once saw an improvement. We continued it with the result you can see in the photo."
