UDW professor wins award

THE deputy dean of education at the University of Durban-Westville, Professor Jonathan Jansen, has been appointed research associate for 1999/2000 at the Centre for Development and Enterprise.

JONATHAN JANSEN

The R30 000 award is for one year and Prof Jansen, who is also director of UDW's Centre for Education Research, Evaluation and Policy, will focus his Centre for Development and Enterprise research on the politics and policies of transition in South African education since 1990 and what the policy trajectory of the 1990s suggests for policy development in education in the next decade.

He will remain with UDW and the appointment will be in addition to his existing teaching and research load.

The Centre for Development and Enterprise instituted a research associate award programme last year to encourage and support the development of professional policy-orientated research capacity in South Africa, particularly among previously disadvantaged communities.

It has committed itself to making one such appointment annually. Applicants for the award were invited to submit policy-oriented research proposals in any field with a bearing on South Africa's economic, social or political development.

Prof Jansen's proposal was unanimously recommended by a six-person selection committee. - Daily News Reporter
