Overview

• AIS Businessplan 2005
• What is an e-book?
• What can ebooks offer us?
• What about user adoption?
Library challenges

- Shrinking budget
- Limited shelving and space
- Cost to repair or replace damaged and lost books
- Out of print titles
- Grey literature
- Demand for resources in electronic formats (links to other resources, including dictionaries and thesauri)
- Demand to support distance learning
How to incorporate ebooks in the workflow

Email Updates

The National Academies Press e-mail service makes it easy to find out about new titles as they are published. Sign up for the subject categories that interest you and we'll send you e-mail notices of books in those topic areas as they are released.

You can change the categories you receive updates for by returning to this page and signing in. After signing in, review or change your categories and submit your changes.

To change where your email updates are sent--for example, you want them sent to your home email address instead of your work email address, sign up a second time using the new email address.

To stop receiving email updates, cancel your subscription by entering the email address you subscribed with.

How often will you get email from us?
It varies, but at most 1-2 emails per week. If we don't publish anything in the categories you selected, you will not receive an email update.

Free Public Domain and Copyrighted e-Books Online

Sam Vaknin offers a really nice roundup of places to find free eBooks online. We've all seen some of these repositories, but a good number of them were new to me, and may be to you as well. Check it out!

Tim O’Reilly answers Authors Guild
September 28, 2005 @ 5:32 am · Filed under Copyright()}

By David Rothman

Tim O'Reilly, one of the most respected publishers of computer books, sides with Google, against which the Authors Guild has launched a copyright suit. Here's part of his op-ed in the New York Times today:

Google promises an alternative to the obscurity imposed on most books. It makes that great corpus of less-than-bestsellers accessible to all. By pointing to a huge body of print works online, Google will offer a way to promote books that publishers have thrown away, creating an opportunity for readers to track them down and buy them. Even online sellers like Amazon offer only a small fraction of the university libraries' titles. While there are many unanswered questions about how businesses will help consumers buy the books they've found through a search engine for printed materials that is as powerful as Google's current Web search, there's great likelihood that Google Print's Library Project will create new markets for forgotten content. In one bold stroke,

Procedure to search UPexplore for electronic books

To access our full text, all users have to register annually at the AIS (Library).

As the “Branch” in the fixed field element is coded as “ein” for Internet another method of grouping the different ebook collections have to be implemented. This is necessary for users to search a specific service unit’s ebook collection. The following collections are already searchable in UPexplore:

Welcome to ebrary®

ebrary provides the content and the technology to make the online research experience easier and more productive.

But simply, ebrary® DOES research and archiving™.
At NetLibrary, we've always recognized that there's no such thing as a one-size fits all library. And that's why we continue to provide more eContent, more access options, and more collection development tools than any other provider. You'll find more than 95,000 eBooks, hundreds of eAudiobooks, eJournals, subject centers and the collection development resources you need to build, manage and enhance your collection. Contact us today to find out how you can get started.
Alvin Toffler stated:

“The illiterate of the year 2000 is not the one who cannot read and write, but the one who cannot learn, unlearn and relearn.”

BANNED BOOKS ONLINE

Welcome to this special exhibit of books that have been the objects of censorship or censorship attempts. The books featured here, ranging from Ulysses to Little Red Riding Hood, have been selected from the indexes of The Online Books Page. (See that page for over 20,000 more online books!)

This page is a work in progress, and more works may be added to this page over time. Please inform onlinebooks@pobox.upenn.edu of any new material that can be included here. Note that the listings are meant to be representative rather than exhaustive. Also, many recent books that have been banned or challenged have not been included here, because they have not been made available online. (But see below).

September 24 - October 1 is Banned Books Week. Read a banned book today!
