CHAMBERS, 4th August, 1868.

Messrs. A. WILMOT and C. BUCKLAND.

DEAR SIRs,—As you have done me the honour of requesting my permission to dedicate your COMPENDIUM OF THE LAW to me, I have thought it my duty to look over the Proof Sheets. I have not presumed to make any alterations in them, but I have satisfied myself that your compilation is a very careful and accurate one, and will prove useful to the public as well as to professional readers.

In the hope that it may meet with the success it deserves,

I remain, dear Sirs,

Yours truly,

A. W. COLE.

PREFACE.

THE Ordinances and Acts of Parliament of this Colony are contained in numerous expensive volumes, which, in consequence of their price, are practically beyond the reach of the Public. But, even when accessible, these books contain so many repealed Acts, and are necessarily so cumbrous and diffuse, that it is far from either an easy or pleasant task to refer to them. Under such circumstances, it is clear that a Compendium of the Law upon important subjects is a desideratum, and it is this which the Compilers now furnish to the Public. Authorities are invariably stated, so as to give the reader not only vouchers for the information contained in the text, but clues to enable him, if he desire it, to obtain a further knowledge of the subject.

Thorough professional revision and scrupulous accuracy are vouched for, and Agents, Farmers, Merchants, and others will find in this volume a convenient means of reference to the Laws of the Colony on the important subjects treated of.
