EMBEDDED LIBRARIANSHIP SEMINAR

31 October 2012, 8:00 – 15:00
Auditorium, Merensky Library
University of Pretoria
Librarianship is changing, and has to change. Librarians need to master new technologies for managing and delivering information; engage with knowledge and information and moving beyond one-shot instruction. It is essential to establish new relationships with information users and the community in which we practice. The name given to this change is ‘Embedded librarianship’

Why this day?

Tertia Coetsee
What is embedded librarianship?
Towards a definition of Embedded Librarianship

When thinking where we came from, how will you describe the traditional role and characteristics of the information specialist (subject librarian)?

How will you describe the ideal information specialist?

What are the 3 main differences between a traditional librarian and a modern information specialist?

Give your own definition for embedded librarianship

In what way(s) do you think can information specialists be embedded?
