CRITICAL ISSUES IMPACTING ON SKILLS DEVELOPMENT IN THE DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SERVICE AND ADMINISTRATION: TRENDS AND OPTIONS

by

HILLIGJE GERRITDINA VAN DIJK

Submitted in partial fulfillment of the requirements of the degree

Doctor Philosophiae (Public Administration)

In the Faculty of Humanities
University of Pretoria

Promoter: Prof. C Thornhill Pretoria
Co-promoter: Prof. JO Kuye May 2003
Prof. DJ Fourie
Foreword

I dedicate this work to my parents, Ferdi and Antoinette. They have been my foundation and my inspiration. They have grounded me and enabled me to fly and pursue my dreams. Their courage and guidance will, forever, direct my path in life.

Acknowledgements

I would like to express my sincere appreciation and gratitude to:

- God, who through His Grace and Wisdom provided me with the opportunity to continuously develop and express myself.
- my exceptional family, my sister, brother and grandparents for all their love, reassurance, comfort and motivation;
- Professor Chris Thornhill, my mentor and promoter, for his patience, advice and encouragement;
- Professors Jerry Kuye and David Fourie, for their support and precise guidance; and
- my friends, for their constant encouragement and patience with me, my ideas and my total inability to focus on anything besides my thesis;
Critical issues impacting on skills development in the Department of Public Service and Administration: trends and options

compiled by

Hilligje Gerritdina van Dijk

Supervisor : Prof. C Thornhill
Co-supervisors : Prof. JO Kuye
               Prof. DJ Fourie
Department : School for Public Management and Administration
Degree : Doctor Philosophiae

Abstract
This study is an in-depth overview of the critical issues impacting on skills development in the Department of Public Service and Administration (DPSA). The South African Public Service consists of individuals with their own potential and career paths. The thesis has convincingly argued that managers in the Public Service need to align the potential of their employees with organisational strategies and policies. The study has shown that the training of employees becomes a necessity when departments want to keep track and meet the expectations of their internal and external environments. The thesis proposes and has proven that an integrated approach to human resource development through the process of performance management is a vital requirement, which is critical for skills acquisition. The study, further, notes that if performance management is implemented appropriately, a viable learning organisation could be created. Linking the system of performance management with the learning organisation offers a unique perspective on integrated human resource management, and thus, an important contribution is made to understanding the theory of Public Administration as it applies to skills development.
This thesis propounds the notion that evaluation seems to be the missing link in training and development of human resources in the DPSA. Research clearly indicates that the only way to ensure that training priorities are met is to make training evaluation part of the design of a training course. The model proposed in this thesis, for the evaluation of training, entails adding value to both individual and departmental performance. Detail reviews from this thesis, which are supported by both quantitative and qualitative imperatives, suggest that it now becomes essential that senior management initiates a process where individual positions, their importance and contributions, are aligned with the effective and efficient realisation of departmental strategies.

The cumulative effect of this thesis resonates on an analysis of both theory and practice regarding the creation and implementation of a learning organisation, which is a landmark for international best practices in the study of public human resource development and training in South Africa.

Key terms:

1. Public service
2. Department of Public Service and Administration
3. Skills development
4. Integrated human resource management
5. Human resource development
6. Training
7. Adult education and training
8. Adult training cycle
9. Training evaluation
10. Performance management
11. Learning organisation.
Table of content

Abstract

Chapter 1: Outline, need and purpose of human resource development in the Department of Public Service and Administration

1.1 Introduction 1
1.2 Nature of the study 2
1.3 Need for the study 2
1.4 Purpose of the study 3
1.5 Problem statement 4
1.6 Methodology 5
1.7 Limitations to the scope of the study 7
1.8 Public Service phenomena relating to human resource development and training 12
   1.8.1 South African Public Service 12
   1.8.2 Public administration 13
   1.8.3 Management 15
   1.8.4 Strategic human resource management 17
   1.8.5 Human resource development 20
   1.8.6 Skills and competency 22
   1.8.7 Training and learning 23
   1.8.8 The learning organisation 25
1.9 Framework 27
1.10 Conclusion 29

Chapter 2: Theoretical constructs in public administration

2.1 Introduction 30
2.2 Historical perspectives on the development of Public Administration 30
2.3 Defining public administration 33
2.4 Schools of administrative theories 34
2.5 The functions of public administration 39
2.6 An integrated approach to human resource management 43
2.7 Conclusion 45

Chapter 3: Historical perspective of the development of the Department of Public Service and Administration (DPSA): 1995-2001

3.1 Introduction 47
3.2 Establishing a new Department of Public Service and Administration 47
3.3 Increased need for human resource development 52
3.4 Tswelopele - we serve the people who serve the people 59
3.5 Human resource development outcomes and implications 63
3.6 Investment in people 68
3.7 Training and development framework 71
3.8 Conclusion 73

Chapter 4: The environmental framework for human resource development

4.1 Introduction 74
4.2 The external environment 74
4.2.1 Political environment 74
4.2.1.1 Founding principles of human resource development 75
4.2.1.2 Legislation affecting human resource development 77
4.2.1.3 Skills development and human resource development 80
4.2.1.4 Training, education and human resource development 88
4.2.2 Technological environment 91
Chapter 5: A human resource training and development profile of the Department of Public Service and Administration

5.1 Introduction
5.2 Adult learning and education
5.2.1 Andragogy
5.2.2 The learning cycle
5.2.3 Learning styles
5.3 Approaches to and types of training
5.4 The training and development profile of the Department of Public Service and Administration
5.4.1 Planning
5.4.2 Guidance
5.4.3 Budgeting
5.4.4 Interpretation
5.5 Conclusion

Chapter 6: Evaluating training and development through the implementation of performance management in the Department of Public Service and Administration

6.1 Introduction
6.2 Fundamentals of evaluation
6.3 Implementing performance management to enhance evaluation
6.3.1 Performance management cycle
Chapter 8: Recommendations and conclusion

8.1 Outline, need and purpose of human resource development in the Department of Public Service and Administration 211

8.2 Theoretical constructs in public administration 212

8.3 Historical perspective of the development of the Department of Public Service and Administration: 1995-2001 213

8.4 Environmental framework for human resource development 216

8.5 A human resource training and development profile of the Department of Public Service and Administration 220

8.6 Evaluating training and development through the implementation of performance management in the Department of Public Service and Administration 225

8.7 The implementation and management of a learning organisation 228

Bibliography 234

Annexure A 248
List of figures

Figure 1.1 Human resource management cycle in terms of training 20
Figure 3.1 Equity targets for DPSA 70
Figure 4.1 I have been given the training opportunities that would realise my career goals 107
Figure 4.2 My career goals coincide with departmental goals and my training opportunities have been determined accordingly 108
Figure 4.3 Training is provided as an incentive for increased work performance 109
Figure 4.4 Departmental training courses are evaluated against individual objectives and goals 110
Figure 4.5 Training courses are evaluated in terms of improved work performance 112
Figure 4.6 Departmental training courses culminate in formal qualifications 112
Figure 4.7 Departmental training courses are aligned with departmental goals and objectives 114
Figure 4.8 Departmental training courses are evaluated against departmental objectives and goals 115
Figure 5.1 The learning cycle 121
Figure 5.2 Developing and adjusting long term training goals as necessary 133
Figure 5.3 Developing alternative strategies for accomplishing training goals 134
Figure 5.4 Assessing the financial feasibility of alternative courses of action 135
| Figure 5.5 | Assessing the technical feasibility of alternative courses of action | 136 |
| Figure 5.6 | Developing plans for the department the include costs, personnel or material needs | 137 |
| Figure 5.7 | Developing personal career paths | 138 |
| Figure 5.8 | Anticipating obstacles to achieving departmental training goals and identifying means to overcome them | 139 |
| Figure 5.9 | Identifying specific training courses needed to accomplish departmental training goals | 140 |
| Figure 5.10 | Establishing priorities among competing training courses | 141 |
| Figure 5.11 | Setting realistic deadlines for completing departmental training courses | 142 |
| Figure 5.12 | Identifying specific training courses needed to accomplish personal training goals | 143 |
| Figure 5.13 | Providing or being provided with specific guidance on how accomplishment is to be measured | 144 |
| Figure 5.14 | Involving staff or being involved personally in making work decisions that affect employees | 145 |
| Figure 5.15 | Preparing or providing input into the department's annual training budget | 146 |
| Figure 5.16 | Providing or being provided with the necessary information regarding the annual training budget | 147 |
| Figure 5.17 | Explaining and justifying the departmental training budget requests orally or in writing | 148 |
| Figure 5.18 | Explaining/clarifying broad training priorities of government to subordinates | 149 |
| Figure 5.19 | Keeping subordinates informed about external issues that impact on their training | 150 |
| Figure 5.20 | Extracting and applying information pertinent to training from higher management directives | 151 |
Figure 5.21 Seeing that departmental training courses reflect management directives/policies 152

Figure 6.1 Establishing performance targets based on training received 160

Figure 6.2 Identifying ways of improving performance through proposed training courses 161

Figure 6.3 Assessing progress toward achieving departmental training goals 162

Figure 6.4 Assessing progress toward achieving personal training goals 163

Figure 6.5 Models and schools of evaluation 165

Figure 7.1 Receiving formal feedback after training courses 202

Figure 7.2 Conducting or participating in formal feedback sessions after training courses 203

Figure 7.3 Presenting periodic reports on departmental training courses 204

List of tables

Table 1.1 Total number of employees according to salary levels and population groups 8

Table 1.2 Summary of strategic focus areas and functional work areas 10

Table 1.3 Composition of employees in Branch: Integrated Human Resources 11

Table 3.1 Breakdown of the structure per level (31 March 2002) 62

Table 4.1 Awareness of government legislation - the Constitution 76
Table 4.2  Awareness of legislation affecting human resource development 79
Table 4.3  Awareness of skills development legislation 87
Table 4.4  Awareness of legislation pertaining to training and education 90

Table 6.1  Number of people who received training during 1998/1999 157
Table 6.2  Training assessment for period 1998/1999 173