LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS

Fig.

- 2.1: Skull of Gypсорhynchus makapani, lateral view, $xl\frac{1}{2}$.
- 2.2: Skull of Gypсорhynchus makapani, ventral view, $xl\frac{1}{2}$.
- 2.3: Tentative phylogenetic scheme indicating possible relationships between extinct and extant bathyergids.
- 4.1: Skull of Bathyergus suillus, lateral view, $xl\frac{1}{2}$.
- 4.2: Skull of Georychus capensis, lateral view, $xl\frac{1}{2}$.
- 4.3: Skull of Cryptomys species, lateral view, $xl\frac{1}{2}$.
- 4.4: Skull of Bathyergus suillus, ventral view, $xl\frac{1}{2}$.
- 4.5: Skull of Georychus capensis, ventral view, $xl\frac{1}{2}$.
- 4.6: Skull of Cryptomys species, ventral view, $xl\frac{1}{2}$.
- 6.1: Mole-hills of Cryptomys hottentotus.
- 6.2: Mole-hills of Bathyergus suillus.
- 6.3: A nest of Bathyergus suillus.
- 6.4: A shield snake, Aspidelaps scutatus, trapped in a Cryptomys tunnel system.
- 8.1: Distribution of Bathyergus suillus in Southern Africa.
- 8.2: Variation in condylo-basal length in skulls of Bathyergus suillus (♂♂).
- 8.3: Variation in condylo-basal length in skulls of Bathyergus suillus (♀♀).
- 9.1: Distribution of Bathyergus janetta in Southern Africa.
- 9.2: Scatter diagram showing ratio of upper tooth row length to condylo-basal length in Bathyergus suillus and Bathyergus janetta.
- 9.3: Scatter diagram showing ratio of lower jaw length to condylo-basal length in Bathyergus suillus and Bathyergus janetta.
- 9.4: Variation in condylo-basal length in skulls of Bathyergus janetta (♂♂).
- 10.1: Distribution of Georychus capensis in Southern Africa.
- 10.2: Variation in zygomatic width in skulls of Georychus capensis (♀♀).
