The experience of hearing children as they cope with having a sibling with deafness

by

Liezl Schreuder

submitted in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the degree

MA in Counselling Psychology

in the

Department of Psychology,
University of Pretoria,
Mamelodi Campus

Promoter: Doctor L M Eskell-Blokland

January 2006

Pretoria
Acknowledgements

The author wishes to acknowledge the following people, who assisted and/or contributed in some way to this work:

Linda Eskell-Blokland for her supervision

The research participants for their willingness to share

Dr Badenhorst and Jan Viljoen for giving research space when I needed it

My parents and family for their support and understanding

Pieter du Toit and Annemarie Maritz for their guidance and support throughout the journey Declaration

I declare that: The experience of hearing children as they cope with having a sibling with deafness, is my own work, that all the sources used or quoted have been indicated and acknowledged by means of complete references, in accordance with departmental requirements.

I have not used another student's past work to hand in as my own.

I have not allowed and will not allow, anyone to copy my work with the intention of passing it off as his/her own work.

Signature________________________

Notes about the text:

1. All participants in this research granted permission to present their conversations here.
2. Names of participants have not been used to protect their identities.
SUMMARY

The experience of hearing children as they cope with having a sibling with deafness

By Liezl Schreuder

MA in Counselling Psychology

Department of Psychology,
Promoter: Doctor L M Eskell-Blokland

Abstract

The objective of this study was to describe the experiences of hearing children as they cope with having a sibling with deafness. From a constructivist point of view, this research process is seen as socially constructing a reality or realities, with the researcher included in, rather than outside the borders of his or her own research. Semi-structured and unstructured interviews were conducted with the subjects. These interviews were aimed at obtaining information regarding the subject’s experience of the stressor of having a sibling with deafness.

The participants reported limited family interaction. Although most siblings say that they have good relationships with their siblings with deafness, their primary feelings indicate that there are aspects of having a sibling with deafness that can be challenging. The participants described experiencing a variety of feelings which include the following: frustration, loneliness, anger, affection, resentment and pity.

The results of this study have shown that the siblings of children with deafness, need more professional support in terms of coping with the disability and its consequences. Siblings need guidance on active coping responses in coping with the stressor of having a sibling with deafness.

Key words: constructivist approach, sibling relationships, coping responses, disability, deafness and stressor.
TABLE OF CONTENTS

Title page.........................................................................................................................i
Acknowledgements........................................................................................................ii
Declaration.......................................................................................................................iii
Summary............................................................................................................................iv
Table of contents.............................................................................................................vi

CHAPTER ONE: INTRODUCTION TO THE STUDY......................................................1

Outline of chapters..........................................................................................................6

CHAPTER 2: THEORY AND PSYCHOLOGICAL FRAMEWORKS.........................8

Introduction.......................................................................................................................8
What is constructivism? ...............................................................................................9

*The history and development of.constructivism.........................................................10

What is the difference between.constructivism and social constructionism?......11
Lazarus’s model of stress and coping.................................................................14
Minuchin’s structural family theory.................................................................16
Conclusion......................................................................................................................17

CHAPTER 3: THE IMPACT OF DISABILITY ON THE FAMILY SYSTEM........19
Introduction..................................................................................................................19

The impact of a child with a disability on the family system.......................................................................................................19

  The family system..................................................................................................20

  The impact of a child with a disability on the family system..............................................................................................21

  The impact of having a child with deafness on the family............................................................................................................23

The sibling subsystem and the impact of disability.....................................................................................................................25

  "Normal" sibling relationships
(without the presence of a disability).................................................................26

  Sibling relationships in the presence of disability....................................................................................................................27

  Exploring the positive effects which brothers or sisters with disabilities have on their siblings.......................................................................................................30

  Exploring the negative effects which brothers or sisters with disabilities have
on their siblings.......................................................................................................31

  Sibling relationships in the presence of deafness.......................................................................................................................33

Conclusion..................................................................................................................37
CHAPTER 4: RESEARCH DESIGN AND METHODOLOGY

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Section</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Introduction</td>
<td>39</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Research design</td>
<td>39</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Research Sampling</td>
<td>42</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Subject selection</td>
<td>42</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Data collection strategies/procedures</td>
<td>45</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Semi-structured and unstructured interviews</td>
<td>45</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Transcription of the interviews</td>
<td>49</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Data analyses: A Grounded theory strategy</td>
<td>50</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Constructivism’s implications for this study and research process</td>
<td>53</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ethical Considerations</td>
<td>54</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Establishing trustworthiness</td>
<td>57</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Conclusion</td>
<td>61</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

CHAPTER 5: RESULTS

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Section</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Introduction</td>
<td>62</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Primary feelings about having a sibling with deafness</td>
<td>63</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Feelings about family interaction</td>
<td>67</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Unequal treatment</td>
<td>68</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Communication issues</td>
<td>69</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Pressures and stressors in the broader social</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
CHAPTER 6: DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSION

Introduction.................................................................................................................79

Primary feelings of having a sibling with deafness.............................................80

Family interaction.................................................................................................82

  Unequal treatment.............................................................................................82

  Communication issues.......................................................................................83

Pressures and stressors in the broader social system.....................................84

Knowledge about the disability..........................................................................86

Conclusion.............................................................................................................86

  The value of this study......................................................................................87

  A critique of the study......................................................................................87

  Suggestions for future research......................................................................88

  Concluding remark..........................................................................................90

REFERENCES.............................................................................................................92

LIST OF FIGURES

FIGURE 1.................................................................................................................28
LIST OF APPENDICES

APPENDIX A  Authorization letter from authorities:
Department of Education ...........................................104

APPENDIX B  Information Brochure ..................................107

APPENDIX C  Letter of consent ........................................112

APPENDIX D  Semi-structured questionnaire .....................115