

10. CONCLUSION

There exists a growing migration from the rural environment to the urban context. Young adults brave the city life in search of a new lifestyle of independence, opportunities and potential.

The meeting place between the rural immigrants and the urban context is an archetype of the new urban life. It is vibrant, energetic, dynamic and diverse. The city holds a magnitude of possibilities, but the language and mechanics of the urban context is multi-layered and complex.

It is essential that a transition facility exists that orientates the rural immigrants in the language and mechanics of the urban context. This facility recognizes that the interaction between the rural immigrant and urban context occurs in various layers.

The facility is therefore an expression of the urban context. It showcases and facilitates the different layers of interaction between the rural immigrants and the urban context.
