Title: Significant others: A visual analysis of the representation of gender in the Afrikaans corporate church

Summary

This study explores how contemporary Afrikaans churches represent gender in their visual culture. For these purposes, a Barthean semiotic analysis is done on visual material produced between 2007 and 2008 by three Afrikaans corporate churches in the Pretoria-Centurion area, namely the Dutch Reformed congregations Moreletapark and kerksondelemure (“church without walls”), and Doxa Deo’s Brooklyn and East campuses – Afrikaans Apostolic Faith Mission congregations. The analysis seeks to demystify and denaturalise the material’s potentially mythical, ideological and hegemonic underpinnings.

Operating from an interdisciplinary theoretical framework comprising aspects of Visual Culture Studies and Gender Studies, this study primarily provides a focused analysis of the representation of men and masculinity in the selected churches according to three themes, namely professional occupation and leadership; physical activity and adventurism; and fatherhood. This focus was adopted owing to the lack of available literature on men and masculinity in the church and Christianity, as opposed to the more ready availability of research on women and femininity. The representation of gender in Moreletapark, kerksondelemure and Doxa Deo is conceptualised in broad terms through a comparison of the representation of masculinity with femininity as its foil. In this regard gender is analysed in the three churches according to notions of gendered ontology and matters of work, marriage and family. Exscripted, or non-represented, themes are also problematised.

It is argued that the churches under investigation represent gender in dualistic, essentialist and often stereotypical terms. This particular depiction of gender attests to the churches’ participation in the biological essentialising of gender, polarising men and women into strict binary dualisms, whilst also visually denying the existence of homosexuality and alternative sexualities. This tendency is problematic, not only because it fails to provide a realistic portrayal of men and women in the three churches, but also because it visually participates in conservative and fundamentalist gender discourses.

Key terms: gender representation, men and masculinity, Afrikaans corporate church, Dutch Reformed Congregation Moreletapark, Dutch Reformed Congregation kerksondemure, Doxa Deo, Barthean semiotic analysis, church visual culture, essentialism, biological determinism, gendered binary oppositions, men’s ministry, women’s ministry, gendering of ministries, exscription.
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS AND DEDICATION

The financial assistance of the University of Pretoria and the University of South Africa towards this research is hereby acknowledged. Opinions expressed and conclusions arrived at in this dissertation are those of the author and are not necessarily attributed to these universities.

The kind support of the various leaders, communications officials and designers from Moreletapark, kerksondemure and Doxa Deo is highly appreciated. I was humbled by these congregations’ open willingness to participate in this study.

The completion of this dissertation would not have been possible without the wisdom, unwavering support and encouragement I received from my study leader, Prof. Jeanne van Eeden. I was lucky to have her.

I am also thankful for the inputs I received from Dr Stella Viljoen (University of Stellenbosch), especially during the conceptualisation phase of this study. I have also enjoyed encouragement from her during the years of this study.

My colleagues – Beschara Karam, Julie Reid, Martine van der Walt, Einerine Greef, Christo Cilliers, Trudie du Plooy, Deirdre Byrne, Jessica Murray, Marlize Rabe, Rory du Plessis – and my mentors – Charmaine du Plessis and Pieter Fourie – you got me through this one. My dearest friends – Anke van der Bank, Marguerite Schmitt, and Maartje and Zander van der Westhuizen – thanks for all the wine. My family – parents Lea and André, grandparents Gert and Hannah, Lealet and Thinus van Staaden, and Shaun, Tracy, Jordan and Rhine† Oliver – thank you for reminding me what life is about.

How does one thank a spouse who was never exasperated by endless nights and weekends of studying? Who patiently supplied coffee, meals, pep talks, the occasional shoulder and afternoon walks to keep me sane? Who in the final days of the writing of this dissertation placed chocolate bunnies on my desk, to keep me positive about staying in front of my computer? Coenrad, I am overwhelmed by your love.

This study is dedicated to my grandmother, Aletta Emerentia Koenig† (Ouma Lettie), who saw the beginning of this study, but, unfortunately, not the completion.

1. In some instances dates are not indicated for Figures in this list. If this is case it has not been possible to establish the exact time of creation of the figure and it can thus be understood to form part of the data sample drawn, which represents 2007-2008. This results from the informal manner in which the churches in this study archive their visual material. For discussion in this regard, see Chapter Five.
