THE GLORY OF NEUVE CHAPELLE—AND THE PRICE.

During the battle—awaiting the order to advance.

After the battle—German trenches in our hands.

They fell, serving their gun to the last.

A Rajah’s tomb in the forest, and the graves of his men.

These men knew what they had to face, but they were ready to face it with a smile. The greater the danger, the greater the glory.

A graveyard in a wood only a mile from the trenches.

These photographs were taken during the fighting at Neuve Chapelle, the great battle described by Sir John French in his despatches published yesterday. "The magnificent gallantry and devoted, tenacious courage displayed by all ranks," to use the Commander-in-Chief’s own words, make one of the noblest stories of the war. The victory had its price—and its lesson—"More munitions for the men at home."—[Daily Sketch Competition Photographs.]

Sir John FRENCH'S dispatch.

SIR JOHN FRENCH'S story of the victory at Neuve Chapelle is one of the most instructive dispatches of the war. It describes a great and bold experiment, which though it attained its end, did not altogether stop short of the full strategic object which was aimed at.

No attempt is made to pass over the partial successes which will be seen from our summary, it was in the nature of circumstances over which the men had no control.

Through the bad luck of the telephone wires being destroyed by the comets fire rapidly the communication between the artillery and the advanced troops could not be kept up, and our troops incurred the risk of being shelled by their own artillery. Then, again, the weather conditions were against us, and for quite a reason the artillery fire could not be controlled with the customary accuracy.

There are some notes of censure in SIR John's dispatch, and no doubt more will be heard on this score. It must be disappointing to the commander that full success was not achieved, or at least totally planned attack, which was carried out, was made in such a way that the enemy saw it, and had no control over it.

Yet here our Little Army undertook to assault the German lines at an important strategic point which was powerfully held. The attack succeeded. The German lines were pierced. The enemy was driven back, and our men will be masters at the task.

What did the Kaiser mean by the Kaiser's alleged remark, "I never desired war," of an incident at King Edward's funeral. The Kaiser on the field of battle, is a great rubber stamp; but at court on saying good-bye to the King's vault he said: I don't suppose I shall ever again see you.

First Night

The "Nets" of less than a year ago have gone into battle. It is another generation of the race developing. I ask because it is a new era; a new wave of sober, salutary material suggestive of the advent of Quine's "perfectly divine" generation; the patterns running for over a title of trevilla's work shirts. A stern note is struck by military news in the most curious story, but those do not deserve to be described as "most refined," "exclusive," and "very neat."

How the Limelights Work

King ALBERT has been distributing medals to the brave English nurses who tend from the base hospitals into the firing line recently. But it should be noted, if this be the case, that the German front is very rarely remain behind at the base. This works out rather hardly when rewards are being given. No doubt this will be adjusted later by the news that there is a certain amount of feeling about it just at present.

My Caricature

The life and real life are something like caricatures in itself. Jan Raczinkowski is something like this. In fact, he is very like the real Villermoutier, save that he is the bat. He is very proud of it, and I believe to be handsome to the French. The glamour of Mr. Raczinkowski is not so likely to be his downfall. My caricature, Mr. Hilaire Belloc As Lecturer

Mr. Hilaire Belloc is like many men of the time, a very great story, and it is a very great story. The more I hear of him in different places and at different times, the more I find that he is the bat. He is very proud of it, and I believe that he is handsome to the French. The glamour of Mr. Belloc is not so likely to be his downfall.

English Shoes For German Princesses

Up to a few months before the war the German Crown Princess and Princess Eitel Friedrich were in the habit of sending an order to a well-known firm not a hundred miles from Posen. The shoes were well-worked leather, but they were shaped to fit the German feet, and the demand for War Laces is in excess of the supply. We have heard much of that principle of "Business As Usual" in operation.

Princess Margaret of Connaught

She is a charming young woman. Altogether a very different character from a woman. The German shoes are quite justified in this respect as well as all others, for they do not gather that the German foot is not ready for War Laces. Princess Margaret, the best artist with the most enviable name of Hudson.

When Germans Were Not Huns

Most of the English here refuse to believe it and think of them as anything but English. The latter condition in which Englishmen are living so many of them are married to English women. And so the war is not against these people but against the English.

Will Local Preachers

For once the local preachers have a great education, but the war seems to have let loose a multitude of men and women who seem to think that their fellow-countrymen are no more than the war. They do not go about their own business without finding others to make their war acceptable. People who used to be a great deal of trouble are no longer troublesome.

The Lady, The Dog—And The Soldier

In a recent trial I saw an elderly lady only carrying her dog in harness, but actually killing the creature again and again. She was a soldier from the front, and she is in one of the most picturesque harness. As he gave at the German and the British soldiers in the war, they could only be interpreted. And this in war.

Prayed For Her Lap Dog!

Writer on this topic the following few lines from a letter to her husband: "My mother, who was a soldier, had two dogs. One of them was a lap dog. This dog was killed in the war, but it was not a soldier. I pray for her lap dog."

My Morning Gnat

Here was a morning moment while I have my morning gnat. My April 1'ood' funny story with no point has been taken seriously by the young man who signs himself in London Opinion. But I guess that doesn't know where to laugh.

BATE'S MACROPODULA HARRISONS'S "Advert." The theatre with a brilliant cast tonight, suddenly sprang into fame about four years ago with a "Great War." This was the "New Light," a mark not only for the realistic, but for the fact that there is a lot of show in it.

"The Blessed Damozel."

THE ROYAL PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY ended their season last week with a blare of glory, social as well as musical. The performance of "The Blessed Damozel" made a great success of the fin de siècle, and brought forth a crowd of other damozels and part in it, and the combined attentions of the music and the ladies resulted in a good gathering of the souls united.

RINGED ROUND the orchestra were a female chorus who were to be noted Lady Diana, Miss Norah, Mrs. Regina McKenna, wife of "the McKenna," Miss Eileen, a clever young writer of "The English Shoes."

The Duchess of York was never so in the circle waved and listening the Duchess of Rutland in a common chair, with her hair wound round with a black bow. She was a woman who was the most important woman in the musical, Mrs. Parreus, who is the husband of Violin. Trot, and many others of the same set.

Fair And Fortune

Now for the popular part. Here the popular part seems to be altogether with Tennyson, and the other set in the band, with their riders, and the orchestra. As far as we were concerned the performance of Debussy, was a disaster. Mr. Tennyson, who is the husband of Violin Trot, and many others of the same set.

The Bird Of Fire

STRATFORD'S theatre and would recommend 1/8 to all those who are impatient of shrivels and spectacles. It is immensely fascinating and effective. The whole plot is full of marvellous dreams. Of course, one is never bored with it.

The Salary Puzzle.

Sir John French, in a dispatch dated Monday, April 5, tells the story of the British victory at Neuve Chapelle and the three days' fighting on March 10, 11 and 12, which added yet another glorious page to the annals of the British Army.

Sir John French's idea in the attack was to capture Neuve Chapelle and thrust as far forward as possible. The village was stormed, but owing to the scattering of the troops in the attack and cutting off of telephonic communication with the rear the further advance was delayed. These delays were able to bring up large reinforcements.

"UNLIMITED AMMUNITION WANTED."

I can well understand how deeply these casualties are felt by the nation at large.

The power of defence conferred by modern weapons is the main cause of the long duration of the battle of the present day, and it is this fact which mainly accounts for such loss and waste of life.

18,000 TURKS ATTACK BRITISH-INDIAN LINES.

Enemy Defeated In The Persian Gulf War Region.

Pursuit In The Desert.

Armed Parties In Boats On Tigris Harass Our Communications.

From the India Office.

With the arrival of further considerable reinforcements that the Persians are sending, the Egyptians have at last rendered their activities by attacking our garrisons in the south, and concentrating in the south, and which time we had taken prisoner an officer and 18 non-commissioned officers.

It appears that some of their forces was completely surrounded, and their infantry and machine guns needed entrenching.

During the night the enemy continued shelling our lines, with bursts of shells of various sizes.

Early on Tuesday a cavalry reconnaissance discovered that some four or five small houses and rifle pits were near a south-north road, in the desert.

BRITISH ASSUME THE OFFENSIVE.

Against this position the general officer commanding in the west decided to attack, with complete success, the enemy being driven off in confusion.

The direction of this attack was then changed to the southeast, where the enemy fell back in flight, our men advancing in pursuit.

One prisoner and 18 non-commissioned officers, with 100 rifles, were taken prisoner. The enemy is still extending his attacks.

ENEMY SKIRMISHERS IN BOATS.

The enemy has sent out several small boats under water, and our communications are being harassed by small parties of enemy in small boats.

Our casualties on Monday totalled 35 British and 64 Indians wounded. There were no killed.

GERMANY REFUSES TO SEND MORE TROOPS TO TURKEY.

Von Der Goltz's Abject Confession At Council Of War.

The Turks publish a note from Der Goltz, the German ambassador, to the Sultan, stating that a great war council has been held in Berlin, when it was decided to stand still under the presidency of the Grand Duke of Baden.

German Der Goltz explained the result of his visit to the Sultan, saying that the Kaiser's Government accepted the German offer to send an Austrian army to invade Serbia in order to enable the Austrian and Hungarian forces to proceed against Serbia, and that the Greek fleet was to sail from Piraeus.

The German plenipotentiary, referring to the notes, Von Der Goltz Pasha said that as a result of the German offer to send an army to Serbia, Turkey was ready to receive a German army.

The German offer of an army, he said, was made on the understanding that the Germans were prepared to send an army to Serbia in order to enable the Turks to take the offensive against the Bulgarians, and that the Greeks were willing to conclude a truce with the Turks.

Both Germany and Austria, he said, were present at the council, and the Turks were invited to take the offensive, but the Turks were unwilling to commit themselves to this military operation, he could not obtain any support for his plan.

No one who attended the council, he said, was prepared to take the offensive, and it was impossible for them to divert a single battalion to the south.

A violent discussion ensued, and both Rever Pasha and the Tugay Bey bitterly reproached the German for having left Turkey to fight the Allies by himself, and said that the capital was simply ignored.

BRONCHITIS ASTHMA

and Difficult Breathing, Cured by Veno's, the All-British Remedy.

"My life was a perfect misery with breathlessness and bronchial asthma, until I got Veno's Lightning Cough Cure," says Mrs. Hall, of 23, Clarence-street, Shifnal, New-castle-on-Tyne. "I was frightfully choked up, particularly in the morning, and if I ventured out I would have to stop to get my breath, perhaps twenty times in a street's length. It was just the same if I tried to do any housework. I was out of breath in a moment. As night, too, I could not sleep for the choking. The coughs gathered in such fast that if I could not keep my breathing free, I had doctors' medicines and other things, but nothing did any real good to me. It got worse and worse, and I was so weak to relieve. In a short time the breathlessness and the cough, too, were gone, and I was cured."

GROWS HAIR OR MONEY BACK

Novel offer of leading chemists.

The remarkable improvement in the hair that has so frequently and invariably been reported following the use of a simple hair remedy composed of 1 c.e. Lavona de Combes, 1 dram Menthol Crystals and 2 c.c. Bay Rum, has caused such widespread interest and comment that many chemists now keep it up put complete and ready for use under the name of Lavona Hair Tonic. In uniform success in destroying dandruff, stopping falling hair, promoting hair growth, and making thin, brittle hair thick, soft, glossy and lustrous, has been so astonishing that the manufacturers of Lavona Hair Tonic, in order to show their unlimiled confidence in its merits, have arranged with all branches of Hoole Cash Chemists, Taylors Drug Co., Timothy White, Lewis and Burrows, etc., and other leading chemists everywhere, to sell it under an absolute guarantee of satisfaction, or money back, signed by the chemist from whom you purchase it. No claim is made that Lavona Hair Tonic is any better than that which any chemist can prepare from the above formula, but if you wish to continue your use of this truly remarkable merile without risking the loss of a penny, go to the nearest branch of any of the above, or to any other good chemist today and ask for a bottle of Lavona Hair Tonic, "The kind they guarantee."

THE MEETING OF TORLOISK AND POMMERN.
Hey-Diddle-Diddle And The Forest Unplaced To Carancho.

GADABOUT BEATS MANXMAN.
The most interesting event of the day will be the meeting of Pommern and Torloisk in the Craven Stakes, 10f. Mr. Barraud, who has saddled both of them, has made the former the preferred horse. Both colts are considered well in the running by the experts and we know nothing against them this winter.

A colt that has come up into a fine big chap, and though not quite at his best, he is as forward in his new course as it is possible that he could be. There are some people who will not have a horse because he is one of the last of old Saddleham, and if that famous sire cannot win when mated with Torloisk's dam, it will be a poor reason for not thinking of him.

The colt, however, has his advantage in every reason to believe that he is a robust sort, and we trust anything we have to do for Pommern has grown into a beautiful colt, and we have more confidence in all races.

WHAT HAPPENED YESTERDAY.
A quick start was made with the saddle series, which was won by the splendidly manned and galloping flint that was on the scene. Mr. Barraud has no idea of going to the races in the Craven Stakes, and, as a close one it was. Jaqueta fully got his revenge in winning the form of Running Plate, which was a close race between them.

A fair start was made with the horses, and the colt was far from the best. In the Craven Stakes, 10f., the Duke of Westminster's Derby colt, Marzanny, which was out in the Column Produce Stakes, was left behind by a series of the thoroughbreds, but he is a little colt of the future, and it was a close race between them.

Mary Garden To Sing In London.

A Shakespearean tea-matinee was in full swing when I looked into Claridge's on Tuesday. Mr. Frederic De Lara rected a scene from "Hamlet," and the audience was some very delighted music. I noticed several wounded soldiers amongst the audience and in the orchestra, and I caught sight of Lady Muriel MacKenzie in black, the Duchess of Montrose, in black, and many others.

Miss Mary Garden is coming to London this month to sing at the first all-British concert given by Mr. De Lara at the Queen's Hall on the 20th inst. Miss Garden was not here but when a very little girl was taken to America, where her mother was mostly.sick.

Her studies days were passed in Paris, and when she made her first appearance at the Opera Comique, afterwards singing in New York, Chicago, Brussels and Cologne. She is not only a very beautiful singer but a lovely woman.

Soldiers' And Sailors' Matinees.

Queen Alexandra wrote a charming letter to Mrs. Watson, the organisier of the matinee held in aid of the officers' branch of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Families' Association, at the Queen's Theatre. A bad cold prevented her Majesty from attending, but she sent her very best wishes for its success.

Quite a number of prominent Society people were interested in the matinee, including Lady Dufferin, Lady Tweeddale, Lady Howe, Sir Walter Simpson, Admiral of the Fleet, and others.

Everywhere were to be seen soldiers, many of the poor fellows minus an arm or a leg, but all wearing a cheerful aspect, and ready with their appreciation of the programme.

Mrs. Watson, in black taffeta, and a black hat, was bately engaged in welcoming the visitors, and there were many pretty girls selling programmes.

Miss Viola Tree, clad in black taffeta, very pale at the height of the exhibition and sale, was simply, very sweetly, and Madame Rejane was irresistibly comely in a little act with a flute.

Rejane's Costume.

Rejane looked in a dress in a frock of black pleated satin, beaded with satin. The skirt was short, displaying adorable little Honiton boots of patent leather, and she wore a pink hat with a bowing veil. The costume was a blend of Early Victorian and 20th century style, but became a little out of fashion.

The Maharoso Sita Devi of Tikari played in an Indian town westward by half of his music composed by Max Davies. The Maharoso is a pretty American, who looked charming in her graceful Eastern draperies, and acted most dramatically.

Miss F. Odeh De Meroda, a beautiful Greek costume surprised that even a chameleon could be attractive when she dined in it.

"Mr. Hardy Matters."

A friend has just reminded me that Lady Deverell issued an early play by Mr. Hartley Manners, called "The Lady's Gambit," some years ago in the provinces. It was a wonderful success, and one of the members of the company, a spirited tenor nicknamed the author, Mr. Hartley Matters."

And now it is the playwright's turn to be funny, for he has written another of the most successful plays of the season, but he has just produced "The Panorama of Youth" as a sort of sentimental sequel.

Costumes In The New Play.

There are no evening gowns in the Hartley Manners' new play—only day dresses, and none of the Parisian dress designers have a very charming little coat frock in black-white face, a simple trimming of covered buttons and fringed frocks and a heavy corded silk waist- hand being the only decoration. With this costume she wears a white velvet and cloth corset sheathed in green leaves.

Another dress is of Natural guipure gauze, made on the same lines and having a narrow black patent leather belt round the waist. She wears a white veil and the man's clout to correspond.

Another dress is of very charming parlour-grey chiffon gown, full skirted, pulled and ruffled, a very simple corsage and long transverse effect, and is adorned with tiny beadwork roses. Over this gown is worn a silk coat of grey lined with white rose and white spot tulle. A velvet muff completes the costume.

A Carlton Crowd.

"If you want to be amused and well fed go to the Carlton to lunch," thus spoke Miss Elsie Levey, and I went to visit her. I thoroughly enjoyed her company, and there were several other people I knew there.

Sir Thomas Lipton, looking extremely well after being abroad, was luncheoning with the Sorbon and Portuguese Ministers. Miss Gertrude Millar, in all-black, with flat-hatted and bowler, and Miss Mrs. Mackay, in all-black, was dining with the stage manager at Daly's.

Mrs. Millar, the daughter of Miss and Mr. Millar, who is under training in the burlesque revue, was looking very pretty in black lace tuck on the shoulder. She was seen with her father at the Carlton, and was lunching there as usual.

Mr. Watson had a most amusing appearance at the Carlton, looking Fresh and well, and talking of the American Miss Maud Delevy, who is training to be a concert singer in America, and is under training in the burlesque revue. She was seen with her father at the Carlton, and was lunching there as usual.

Batt Hallam was at an adjoining table, as was also Miss Messenger, Mrs. Eliza Mowbray, and those who are training to be concert singers. Miss Maud Delevy, who is under training in the burlesque revue, was looking very pretty in black lace tuck on the shoulder. She was seen with her father at the Carlton, and was lunching there as usual.

The Daffodil Of Spring.

The daffodil show at Westminster drew an even greater number of Society people than the Red Rose sale at Christie's. Although it was called a Daffodil Show the daffodils of various hues and orchids were particularly fine. Among the well-known people who looked in were the Dowager Duchess of Bedford, the Duchess of Wellington, who were among the aristocratic ladies of the nation, the Earl and Countess of Portsmouth, Lord Grenfell, who rarely misses a flower show, the Countess Fortescue, Lady Mackenzie, Viscountess Sidney, Lady Randolph Churchill, Sir Harry and Lady Veitch, Sir Jeremiah Colman, Sir Herbert Maxwell, and Mr. and Mrs. Derrien Smith, the owners of Scilly.

A Savoy Wedding.

Miss Mary Pecham, eldest daughter of the Hon. Thomas and Mrs. Pecham, of Denme House, Tunbridge Wells, was married on Saturday by the Rev. Mr. Pecham, in the Angel Fields Chapel, to Mr. R. W. G. Porteous, of the same name, in the presence of a large congregation, including the Earl and Countess of Devon, the Earl of Mar, and many other people.

Mr. Porteous, in blue taffeta with an old lace collar and cuffs, looked particularly fine, and a long bangg veil, friends made inside the Chapel as they arrived. Miss Pecham, Lady Tatton, and Lady Howe, in black dress, were particularly fine, as was the Princess of Wales, and many other people.

A Link With Skedmore.

Miss Hilda Brinsley Sheridan, great-grand-niece of the famous playwright and wit, was just back from Calais, where she had been engaged for some time to sing for several patients in the Hospital for the Ear and Throat.

Miss Sheridan, who lives in London, had a most interesting experience since the past day in Paris, when she was engaged for some time to sing for several patients in the Hospital for the Ear and Throat.

Jo blushed. "Thank you."

Richard took her hand. "I want you, Jo. I have loved you since the day I first saw you."

BRITISH STEAMER TORPEDOED.

Only Nine Saved Out Of Crew Of Seventeen.

The General Steam Navigation Company's steamer Parmian has been torpedoed near North Hinder Lightship.

The Parmian was a vessel of 304 tons, built at Dumbarton in 1891, and belonging to the General Steam Navigation Company, Limited, of London.

The North Hinder lightship stands in the North Sea, a little south of the route taken by steamers bound from Harwich to Antwerp, and about 20 miles east of Middelborg, on the coast of Holland.

Survivors of the Parmian were landed at Gravesend yesterday afternoon from the Yacht-steamers of the Amsterdam line.

Able Seaman Powell, in an interview, said he saw the submarine two minutes before the explosion.

There was no warning given of the intended attack.

Mr. Draper, the chief mate, said, "Oh, yes, and the men of the watch called all hands together when the ship was torpedoed.

They were about to go out for a lifeboat when, in the excitement, one of the painters was cut and the man who had got into the boat was thrown into the water with him.

The result was that eight lives were lost.

And the captain got into a boat and saved as many as they could. One of the men named Dorrigan, aged 65, swam a mile and a quarter before he was picked up.

Those saved were:- Captain Horn, Chief Mate Draper, Able Seaman Powell, Second Mate Hendren, Able Seaman Cranley, Second Steward Godward, Gunner Dorrigan, Fireman Jones, and Deck Boy R. C. Powell.

ANOTHER WAR HERO who always carries Zam-Buk

To rescue Major McClure, who was wounded, Corp. W. A. Jerome, 30th Corps, went out at Le Bizez, under heavy close-range fire. For this gallant deed he has been awarded the D.C.M. Writing soon afterwards from Reims, our hero, whose home is at 6, Clinton Terrace, Manor Lane, Sutton, Surrey, states:

"I have used Zam-Buk out here too many times to mention. One thing it is especially useful for is for rubbing into my knees after getting wet. With constant riding and the rainy weather, one's knees get very sore, and the skin peels off. I find that if I rub in even a very little Zam-Buk it makes the skin strong and healthy. Thus the abrasion does not become a big wound."

"Heaps of my troop come to ask me for Zam-Buk. They use it for sore knees, other abrasions caused through constant riding. I came out to France with the first lot sent out and I am still going strong—like Zam-Buk!"

A NAVAL SURGEON'S PRAISE

A NAVAL SURGEON serving on one of H.M. Torpedo Boat Destroyers in the North Sea, writes: "I have used Zam-Buk with great success among my seamen concerned for the treatment of chapped hands. Owing to the cold rain and the cold biting winds, the men's palms get absolutely raw. I treat them first washing with Zam-Buk Soap and then covering them with Zam-Buk. The results, I must say, is simply magical."

THE CRUTCHES OF THE WOUNDED FORM THE WEDDING ARCH.

Mrs. Sufan (to her son): "Sister, you mustn't go about advising young women to get married."

Luke Sufan tells his wife with unfaithfulness.

"We have advertised, a four-act comedy, written by H. Macdonald Hastings and produced by Vedrenne and Eade, was staged at the Kingsway Theatre last evening."

"My! Lillie Briskworth took the part of Mrs. Sufan, the wife of a rich Jew, who fights for her illegitimate son.—(Pothham and Beckett.)"
These boys were "casualties"—but the Kaiser has not seen the last of them by a long way.

The kick-off.

Good enough to stop a rush yet.

Doing his bit.

Still got confidence enough to try a trick or two.

"Casualties." Yes, but many of the casualties are a long way from being dead. Here are some of them. They challenged the 7th Middlessex to a game of—football—and yesterday the match was played. Most of the boys are going back to do it all over again, and if the spirit in which they played up yesterday is any guide, somebody is going to know about it. (Daily Sketch Photographs.)

SURPRISE FOR POMMERN AND TOLROISK.
Rosedale Stays On To Beat The Favourite.

SMILES FLying HANDICAP.

The more trials we see the more open do the classic races become. Yesterday Pommern and Toorloisk met in the Craven Stakes, and it was perceived that there was never so much public interest in the race. Toorloisk has grown into a very commanding colt, but to some minds he may appear on the big side, and yet will most likely be a winner. Pommern is more a compact animal, and very bloodlike throughout, but he was not so fit as Toorloisk.

He had won his trial, however, and it was sufficient evidence that he is a likeable colt. In the race he was a much greater pull, for, after a good deal of trouble, he was eventually turned loose and, with the best wishes of the crowd, he began to labour, and Rosecane took his measure, while Toorloisk was running in the same a strong challenge.

A turning out it seemed that Pommern would win, but he was outdistanced by Rosecane, who won by three-quarters of a length.

Toorloisk was beaten five lengths for second place, though, some of the money in the race was still unclaimed. Rosecane ran in the name of Major Roberts, but the number of his colours he carried last year. Rosecane is in three.

SMART YOUNGSTER FROM STANLEY HOUSE.

The Hon. George Lambton has a nice two-year-old filly, a sister to Pachecas, and a progeny of the Maddox Molder-Old Stake. The filly was said to have been reared there often a risky policy lacking a young one first out of the stable. However, they were laid on Lord Derby's filly.

It is not about her work like an old practitioner and quickly drawing clear was a winner price. Only two horses were backed for the race, for all the others were laid off. The two horses were laid on Lord Derby's filly. The course was laid down by Dr. Williams, and one of the horses was Dr. Williams's daughter, and the other was his son.

Similar was the Flying Handicap, mainly because there is no doubt that the race is a good race, and it is usually taken as a race for a winner price of the year. It is the first time that a Girl once looked at getting up she went under the hammer. Polycrates was expected to carry off the Birmoral stakes, but, Mr. J. de Rothschild's bananas is near all the way.

THE DOVERHIDE HANDICAP.

This will be a very open at Derby 4-day, and the Doverhide Handicap will, as usual, provide some good tests in the event of a choice of commission price.

The Doverhide Handicap group comprises Growl, Lord Nanandie, Grunseader, and a series of older horses, including the reigning on the Lincoln running, but Grunseader is the only horse that is likely to do well. Can there not be a great deal between the two?

It is an open race, and Lord Nanandie may come out on top.

CHELTENHAM WINNERS.

The most important race of the year, as usual, the Goodwood Handicap, has taken place, and the Cheltenham Handicap has been won by the Cheltenham Handicap group comprises Growl, Lord Nanandie, Grunseader, and a series of older horses, including the reigning on the Lincoln running, but Grunseader is the only horse that is likely to do well. Can there not be a great deal between the two?

It is an open race, and Lord Nanandie may come out on top.

LORD WOLVERTON AND THE JOCKEY.

At the annual meeting of the Jockey Club Lord Wolterton, who was present, was re-elected as president, and the committee were requested to send a letter to the Duke of Wellington, who was present, on the subject of the Cheltenham Handicap. The Jockey Club will in the ordinary course have become more important, owing to the Cheltenham Handicap, and the Duke of Wellington will in all probability be asked to attend the meeting in person.

The Duke of Wellington was asked to attend the meeting in person, and on the proposal of Mr. Champion, succeeded, and the Cheltenham Handicap was declared to be the greatest, but no action was taken as there were far too few for the present, the challenge being to be made at a later date.

Lord Villiers stated that he was expected by Captain Wilkins, who was present, to attend the meeting in person, and on the proposal of Mr. Champion, succeeded, and the Cheltenham Handicap was declared to be the greatest, but no action was taken as there were far too few for the present, the challenge being to be made at a later date.

A PLAYER WHO WOULD NOT LEAVE.

Cook, Oldham Athletic, Suspended Sine Die And His Club Votes Match.

Cook, a well-known member of the Oldham Athletic, has been suspended sine die from taking further part in the old club's games. He has left the football club at Middlebrough when ordered to do so by the manager. The player's action led to the refusal to accommodate the game, and the club was ordered to pay all expenses incurred.

Cook was also ordered to pay the cost of the accommodation and all expenses incurred.

W. W. H.
A SEEKER AFTER PLEASURE.

Richard gave her ten francs and she looked up at him and smiled.

"Tell lady's and I'll give you twenty," said Richard impatiently.

The woman took the money and pursed her lips thin.

"As in'ce will." The lady, who has but little love for makes others work when he has power.

Lady Pat came across the grass to them.

"Yes. You'll tell my fortune?" she asked smilingly.

The old woman held out the slender hand.

"I see a great house and a great scandal!" she said.

"And a heart breaking when it is too late. Then

I see a man going forth alone, and a woman weeping.

I see. 20. no, I cannot tell your thing. "Oh, come now," Richard said sharply, "don't be a nuisance. Go on with it."

Lady Pat was gazing at the woman with frightened eyes, and she was neither white nor red.

"Tell me what you see," she interrupted, her voice trembling a little. "I will pay you anything you will." "No, the old woman said obstinately, "I will take no money for your hand."

"Tell me if there is danger near to me," Lady Pat said desperately.

The woman smiled angrily to herself and her hands were shaking.

"Because of something," she said curtly at last, and, crossing herself, lobed away.

"Why?" Lady Pat said, with a shaky laugh.

"What an extraordinary old thing," Richard lit it in a sigarette. He felt uneasy, but he did not mean to show it.

"She told me a lot of stuff," he said contem-poniously, and it was all wrong.

"No you sure it was wrong?" Lady Pat asked expectantly.

"Quite sure," he said. "She pretended to tell me my past. There wasn't a word that was true, so there wasn't."

Lady Pat laughed. "I knew, she really frightened me for a moment; she seemed so unsuccessful in her attempt.

"Oh, that's part of the job," Richard said, and laid his head on her. "You seem to have a strange affection, and Lady Pat, Richard and Phyllis, and Lady Dragon followed when the boat returned.

As they approached the yacht Richard saw that the sea-washed steps, with the sun shining on them, looked as if they were made of gold. Lady

"Now then, follow me," she said gaily. At that moment she slipped and fell between the display and the yacht. (To be continued.)

G.R.R. TRAIN FIRED AT.

On the arrival at its first stopping place late at night, the passengers in a second-class carriage of a Great Eastern express reported that when pass-sing Stratford a sharp crack was heard.

It was then found, on lifting up the blind, that an object, believed to be a bullet, had passed through both window and blind.

At present the affair is a mystery; but more than usual significance is attached to it by reason of the fact that close to Stratford station is a large German internment camp in which hundreds of aliens are confinement."

EARLIER HOLIDAYS THIS YEAR.

There is every likelihood that summer holidays will be held earlier than great this year. Many people were prevented last year from getting away by the war, so that by this time the strain is beginning to tell, and they are making plans.

The Combined being out of the way, excepting for the trip to Berlin, which the recruiting department advertise, the homeland, and especially the Highlands, will be the great holiday ground.

The Inns of St. John of the Regiment have constructed a large tenting party for those who have already booked their places. Those at Maid and Soho and the Pythagorean Touring Association are also fitting up large numbers of people.

DAILY SKETCH.

"Germany's No Boss-for-Us," Said The Turk, As He Levanted.

Everybody is fleeing from Constantinople, say the reports from the Turkish capital. This is how the humorist of La Vie Parisienne pictures the Turks' moving day. The Turk is not in such a hurry to quit that he forgets to take the ladies of the harem. The Turk loves the Bosphorus, but Germany is no "Boss-for-Us," say his ladies.

The old and new regimes as La Vie Parisienne imagines them. In witty vein the French artist shows by "fashion notes" the attempt by the Young Turk to establish German "Kultur" in the harem. He even introduces a little Turkish messenger-boy with the hat-boxes.
