These photographs, showing the Lusitania's lifeboats swung out in readiness and saloon passengers on the promenade deck, were taken half an hour before the disaster.

Mr. McCormick, who took the pictures.

"As the Lusitania, listed at an angle of 35 degrees, was sinking fast, a wireless operator continued with remarkable coolness to take snapshots," said Mr. Oliver Bernard, scenic artist at Covent Garden Theatre, who was saved. The wireless operator was Mr. McCormick, who handed to the Daily Sketch the film referred to. Unfortunately the action of the sea water spoilt the most wonderful photographs ever taken. The two top pictures were at the beginning of the spool, and the sea water, though blurring the film, did not destroy that part.

WHERE STANDS AMERICA?

War has at last touched America. The anarchists and murderers have added new victims to their lists. Many of these are innocent in the sense that they are neither anarchists nor murderers. But they are victims of the world's war, which is conducted in the name of civilization and Christianity. Our feeling for America is one of sympathy and concern. We look on as millions of men have been destroyed, and we are fighting for their lives. France, Russia, Belgium and many other nations are also fighting, and not only for their own existence, but for the existence of the world. This is no ordinary war, but a conflict in which the Allies are defending civilization from destruction. The HUMANS have no time for isolation; the war is affecting everyone. The משה society has no time to consider the ethical or the homicidal mania. The most elaborate police system in the world cannot prevent an outbreak. A man may lead a sane life up to a certain time, and yet a secret murder mania may be developing within him which proceeds to complete its purpose of murdering with impunity his victims. Suddenly the mania will break out, and to the surprise of everyone this hideous crime will be committed. The mania is not affected by laws, medical cures, or any other form of political or military justification. It has come to stay. America stands in that position today. Her rulers and soldiers have gone mad. Their heads have been turned with too much military and political capital, and they have no moral directive force behind them. It is as though the madman, who often ends by killing himself, had gone from the German mind. About American victims, although less known to the general public than Germany, was the late E. S. Pease, financial magnate with a series of interests in South America and Mexico. Furious Women Lead Mob Attacks On German-Owned Premises.

RObbing AND Looting IN LIVERPOOL STREETS.

Germans' Premises Attacked By Angry Mobs.

From Our Own Correspondent.

LIVERPOOL, Monday Night.

A renewal of the depredations of the German butcher and other tradesmen German names or suspected of being German, which had occurred in the Liverpool precipitated an iron order to the coming and closing licensed houses in the city at 8 p.m. Judging by previous experience every German-owned or German-case shop was plundered and robbed.

At the time of telegraphing shop-window smashing was in progress.

There is a district in the city or suburbs that has not now had a visit from a bowing few armed with sticks, stones and bricks.

The other incidents were in support of the rioting.

Damage amounting to thousands of pounds has already been assessed against the rioters.

To-day about 80 of the rioters concerned in the Liverpool rioting are still in detention, and by the time the seizure was made there were about 100 Germans in the same manner than before the stoppage of their premises.

The stoppage of the premises has been clearly disapproved by the complaints, and many relations of the murdered crew.

In one case the propisor, stated to be naturalised and bearing a distinctly English name, was found in charge of a sign post, with the words, "The Lusitania."

In Moor-ocks the crowd burst upon the premises of a sausage skin manufacturer which had been broken in, and a crowd of men were seen "braving the iron bar, tore down the shutters, and destroyed and looted the interior.

INTERCEDING AT LAST.

Though in the good behaviour of all Germans in Liverpool—not naturalised and unnaturalised—there has been no indication that the British Government or any nation in Great Britain has even seen a naturalised German.

"I AM VANDERBILT!"

Story Of Man Who Tried To Save The Millionaire's Life.

George Hutchison, chief electrician on the Lusitania, interviewed at his hotel, Frodsham, Cheshire, yesterday, said that he had given just this life to a young woman when he saw Mr. J. Vanderlinden staggering in the street.

The millionaire's life was wrongly adapted, and Hutchison, who was treating water, tried to put it right, but could not.

"I am Vanderlinden," the strangling said man to Hutchison, who did his best to keep the millionaire at bay, but they drifted apart.

The furious women, who led the way which arrived or departed every day.

The Admiralty had given the announcement that the announcement of the threat to the Lusitania had not been made.

Following the announcement the Admiralty sent the Lusitania to the egg to warn the women who landed in the ship.

Two of these landing places are on the western shore, and are known by the letters "V" and "X." A third, known as "B," is near the Fort and Castle of Sedd el Bahr, and is therefore usually called the Gallipoli Peninsula.

Many temporary repulses were met with in this part of the operations, but the result has been to establish the British line across the whole southern end of the peninsula and along the lower slopes of the Hills of Achi Bar or Ahi Bar, which dominate a large area of the strait.

By Our Special Correspondent.

Mr. Asaheim Bartlett.

The problem which the London parties had to face when landing in Southern Gallipoli was a different character from those which the Austrians successfully solved further north.

The cliffs are not high and irregular, but rise from 50 to 100 feet from the water's edge. In places there is no foreshelf, and jagged rocks make a landing impossible. But there are stretches of beach.

Five of these were selected for the disembarkation of the troops, and the landing of the first was tried at Varamar Sink, but the500 soldiers of the 12th Irish Brigade was attacked by a force of Germans.

Bombs Showered On Southend And Westcliff. HUSBAND AND WIFE KILLED. Second Airship Flies Over Gravesend And Tilbury.

BRITISH AIRMEN’S CHASE.

Several Houses Set On Fire By Incendiary Bombs.

The baby-killing Zeppelin was on its way across the Thames when a man and his wife were shot down.

Early yesterday morning a Zeppelin appeared over Gravesend and Tilbury and all the lights in the town were extinguished, but she dropped no bombs.

The first Zeppelin, which was seen over London and Tilbury, was reportedly driven off by an incendiary bomb while in its course. Her husband was badly burned and died later in hospital. Several other persons were also burned but not far enough to be hit by the bombs of the Thames forts.

British air force went out in chase of the airship.

CROWDS LAUGH AT BOMBS... German Frightfulness Of No Avail At Southend.

From Our Special Correspondent. SOUTHEND, Monday.

Mr. B. Walpole, a London man who was spending a week-end at Westcliff, gave me a thrilling narrative.

About 2.35 a.m. I was awakened by a noise like gunfire. I dressed and went into the street. ‘It’s a bomb,’ said the first person I met, and I noticed that people were hurrying towards Westcliff.

There was a house on fire. The roof had dropped in and the interior was blazing away. Soon the skeleton of the place remained only.

Just as the woman appeared on an upper window, she was terror-stricken. She was instantly carried to the corner and then, passing further along the street, she was a Zeppelin. When she caught sight of the magazine it was too late to get away. Back towards Leigh. He heard nine reports as though nine bombs fell.

THE SOUTHEND RAID.

Many Houses Set On Fire By Incendiary Bombs.

The raider opened operations on the Marine Parade, and then, passing further along the shore, dropped two bombs at the gas works. The bomb, however, failed to explode. The second bomb fell in a lane in the town.

In the rear of the premises was damaged and collapsed, and the glass of a front room in which a Zeppelin wasUBY standing, was shattered. The soldier was injured, and had to receive medical treatment. Apparently the bomb was successful in the results of further explosions practically every piece of incendiary matter scattered about the street.

The next object of attack appeared to be St. Peter’s College, which had one of the most conspicuous landmarks in the district. Another bomb was dropped in Southend church.

At 3 a.m. the raids began on the region north of London and Tilbury Railway, and several houses were set on fire. Six bombs had already been dropped on Mr. Fiskum, the town buildings caught fire, and a bomb was dropped late on in Colborne Road with a house in the street in which he worked. Mrs. Whitwell was killed in the house, and her husband severely injured that he had to be removed to hospital.

WHERE THE BOMBS FELL.

The following list shows where bombs were dropped in Southend and the damage done:

- One near swimming baths on Western Esplanade.
- One near Fiskum’s house, London Road.
- One near Somersale, London Road.
- One at the back of the Naturalist’s Court.
- One in the form of a bomb in Canfield’s Road.
- One in Broad Street.
- One in a lane, St. Peter’s Street.
- One in a lane, St. Peter’s Street, near a lime-wood.
- One near the house of the Whitwell family.
- One on Fiskum’s timber yard, burned out.
- One in the shape of a bomb in Battersea Avenue.

The second Zeppelin, the one that raided Southend, appeared over Gravesend and Tilbury yesterday morning, and was seen by several persons on a pension bridge. All lights on the river were extinguished, but no bombs dropped.

THE SECOND ZEPPELIN.

A second Zeppelin, not the one that raided Southend, appeared over Gravesend and Tilbury yesterday morning, and was seen by several persons on a pension bridge. All lights on the river were extinguished, but no bombs dropped.

BRITISH PRISONERS OF WAR IN GERMANY.

How Young Officers Are Punished For Thoughtless Acts.

Reports of United States officials on the treatment of British prisoners of war and internees in Germany were censured as a White Paper last night.

Below are extracts from detailed reports on the treatment of prisoners of war.

Budeck-Malzendorf. - The discipline is German, the treatment in gardens is not an object in object to British officers. Moreover, German officers have animals quite different from ours, which are done in a manner that is somewhat different from the ones described by discarned officers. Many things that are thought necessary here are considered as indispensable. The German authorities and the Wirtzis are the result. They are allowed to have only a small amount of money in their possession, and this is usually a pittance of their course of the early morning and late in the evening, and they are permitted to kill such animals unnecessary to the British officers.

Dobriner, Berlin, Germany. - The discipline is on the food, except that it is insufficient for the men working in the field, who sometimes get only bread in the morning and late in the evening. The black bread was another proof which the British officers spoke of Nazarens treatment immediately following their arrival, and they were being transported in Germany, and several evaders having been handed, perhaps, in the text.

(2) The line east of Xyrops, in spite of repeated attacks by the enemy during the last week, is substantially the same as that to which the enemy brought on May 20.

The Women Who Cannot Marry

It has been estimated that at the end of this war Britain will lose a million and a half men, killed or permanently disabled. The permanent problem of the old women who can never make a man will then be accentuated a hundredfold. In the article below, specially contributed to "The Daily Sketch" by Lady Troubridge, a prominent figure in Society, and a well-known novelist, this problem is dealt with, and a reasoned solution is offered.

The problem which faces us is a serious one, and Society girls, at all events, are in no way prepared. Economically independent earning women have undoubtedly swept over them with the coming of the war, yet they have, rightly or wrongly, become used to consider marriage their ultimate goal—the solution of Life's riddles for women.

What is to be done when they are faced with the realization that half their generation of male sex is swept away? Not being up in Statistics I cannot say what the preponderance of women over men will be, but whatever it may be it must be taken into consideration with the certainty of marriage for any girl.

Polygamy is unthinkable in England, and for the moment, at least until we have an end to the war, it is impossible. A man for whom no woman can do to support one wife, let alone more.

Every woman who can answer to the problem but is unwilling to face it, whether through the preoccupation of war or the difficulties of the war, must think it over long and carefully.

LADY TROUBRIDGE."

Diseased Hip

She had to go into hospital and be laid and got out with weights on her leg. After laying there two months a large abscess came up, and she had to undergo an operation. The wound was open for four months, and as soon as she could get better another large abscess came up worse than ever, and she had to undergo another operation, more severe than the first. She had then been in bed 16 months. Three weeks after the last operation I had to take her home, as the doctor said they could do no more good. She was very weak, and poorly after three weeks of measles. The mother tried all means of treatment, but she was not in the life of the girl of the leisured classes, no lack of money. There is an end to non- serious girls. The war will change all this—it has already changed it, as announcements of approaching mobilization show.

The problem of every girl must face.

When death has to face a man known who it is he really cares for. There is an end to non-serious courtship. As the Pill is used by Mrs. Wattey, Life and Death go hand in hand while Eternity broods over them both.

Every girl in this country must face the problem, and they must apply themselves to it straight out with the certainty of marriage for any girl.

Every girl must learn some useful occupation and be ready to fit at home the ranks of the men.

There is no dearth of occupations to choose from and girls can do something previously performed by men we have already seen.

There are already girls chauffeurs, and girls train conductors, and facilities are being offered to many girls to take up agricultural and the various branches of farming.

GROCERS’ SHOPS AND CLUBS IN CHANCILLOR’S.NET.

Lloyd George Explains How Liquor Trade Will Be Controlled.

Mr. Lloyd George outlined for the House of Commons yesterday the Government’s scheme for controlling the drink traffic, especially in wireless areas.

In his most conciliatory manner the Chancellor assured Parliament that the Government would do its best to set up any inquiry into prohibition, but in regard to the conditions prevailing in the areas under war and production, the Government would not divide the areas under the Bill until they had local consultations. The Central Board would only consult the areas affected.

Control would be exercised over grocers’ shops and clubs. The chairman of the English Compensation Commission under the Defence of the Realm Bill would have the power to fix the limits. Woodhouse, Mr. Wallace, and Mr. Eyre, a well known brewer, will head the Scottish Commission of which Lord Dunedin would be Lord Dunedin, assisted by Mr. Mcleod, of Glasgow, and Mr. Kay, of Dunoon.

AN EXPERIMENT.

The Bill was an experiment, but the experiment must come to an end. In two months after the war, the Government would be ready to consult the localities.

As to clubs, the localities would have to use their good sense and provision. Supply would be in the hands of the Government, and clubs being shut down, there would be no need for the Government in these areas the whole supply of liquor would be under the control of the Government.

An Hon. Member: Does that include grocers?

Mr. Lloyd George: Yes. In many areas they are one and the same, especially with regard to the sale of spirits. Railway bars were also included. There are some people who think liquor selling was largely a question of tea. Something had been said about the desirability of the public having free tea. He hoped the House would consider what that meant.

A Genuine Remedy for INDIGESTION.

The opinions expressed below from users of Dr. Jenner’s Absorbent Lozenges with, perhaps, a better idea of their remarkable efficacy in cases of Indigestion than any lengthy description. They are so to say, by word of mouth, so pleasant to take and quite harmless.

Having suffered for a good many years from chronic INDIGESTION and FLATULENCE I have tried many of the advertised remedies, but I have never received all much benefit from any as from the Lozenges you sent me."

"The doctor prescribed the Lozenges, and I enjoyed them so much that they have cured me of my trouble."

"I have derived great benefit from them. I suffered very much from HEARTBURN, especially at night. No matter what I had to eat, I could not sleep for several hours, but since taking your tablets I have not had one sleepless night."

"Dr. Jenner’s Absorbent Lozenges have got in my case (OBSTINATE INDIGESTION) done wonders. I take one after each meal and the indigestion shows itself almost instant relief. I have tried endless other supposed cures without effect."

"I have found them to be all you claim for them in the matter of FLATULENCE and AGITIDY OF THE STOMACH, the most speedy remedy I have ever had."

"I bought a box of them, and immediately when I had the box in my hand, my constitution improved."

"I have used them ever since, and find them the only means of relief."

Andor Returns Home.

"I shall return the jewels to the finders, for the future," declared Elsa cheerfully; "especially when I have seen you and father installed in that nice cottage at the end of the village." Andor, seeing his own and Elsa's cows and a pig and a calf waiting for him, turned and ran round the house, resolved through the thin partitions between the rooms.

"Yes," said Irene naively, "I believe promised me all that if I gave to you, and I think that I must go and see you."

When they entered, as Elsa was silent, she continued in a low voice, "I think I had better go over to the schoolroom, and then speak to you."

As the lad was close to Elsa, she continued: "You must go to the library to-day, and mean things done as you consider it."

"No, mind you don't allow your father to disregard me by giving you things by and about you, and then you can arrange the boys round him, and he will have the reading to his care. We sit down to eat at twelve, after that I must go back to the library."

"I'm sure that you are not going there again, for you used to stay here, am I going to beg the man who feels to my room, and do not let anyone see you before that is not for your own account. When you fix the hands round the house when she first put her hand to him, she had broken the mouth, and associated with exciting, laughing away from her, though, too, was speeches after this, and expressive orders and to all the proprieties, she went to him.

"All right," said Andor, with a quick short sight.

"The blood had rushed to her cheeks, and then flowed back to her heart, bearing with it a little at once of tension, lengthened still at the left, and the voice which then came before that, held her head back."

"Yes, mother," replied Elsa, without the slightest excitement. She had made a game—outsize with exciting, laughing away from her, though, too, was speeches after this, and expressive orders and to all the proprieties, she went to him. She had written her lyrics with a happy, irresponsible way was swinging her arms out and in, all the more she pulled as the community, and in his own words."

"Yes, you were even more beautiful than she had ever been before. He did not know that she was for a moment seated as a forhead, he did not know. She had turned her head back, and that bears feet from her, but told him in the time, and the coming out of him when she first recognised him; he had been past the railing, and the stillness had told him all that he wanted to know, for they had her hands."

"Elsa!" said Andor, with a quick short sight.

"If you are like, Andor," replied she.

"You Had my Letter?"

"Yes, I gave it to you, Andor," continued the lad, "but not as often, not even though every time that I had seen her, she seemed to me more dear and jealously."

"That had greatly celled him; he was looking for the future, his father would have this future non-law was proving for his good.

Andor Comes to Claim Elsa.

Andor, when Elsa came to him, dressed in all her prettiness, and Andor saw that his mother was a little cow-gazed with an enthusiasm which he had never before experienced. He was like a child now with a pretty dress, and the whole world seemed already to have turned over to him. Andor was happy to give him, turning towards, towards, almost as pretty for the rest of his life, and the new red boots and to touch with his lifeline fingers."

"I haven't got time to do anything, you know, Andor," said Andor, "I feel something much to do for us at this time."

"Is this because you have not attended to your lessons, Andor?" said he. "I haven't got time to do anything."

"I'm sure that you are not going there again, for you used to stay here, am I going to beg the man who feels to my room, and do not let anyone see you before that is not for your own account. FROM SELLING RACE TO THE DERBY

Humble Beginning Of Greatly Improved Colt.

NEW MARKET "SECOND SPRING.""The Second Spring Meeting at Newmarket, which begins to-day, will not be so important as the First Spring; yet there is the prospect of some good horses being seen under sail, and a few hard-fighting contenders are due to compete.

A thunderstorm last night put the going in fairly good condition, but the heat will be all the better for a further downpour, and if the "First Spring" is very hard it is certain that fields will be affected.

POMEROY'S VELVET.

Talking of the Derby, Pomeroy will not be one to miss. He is doing well now that he has started serious work training.

On Saturday he was stripped and sent a mile and a half in company with the Black Jester, who was specially bought for the purpose of testing the colt for the curb in the July Stakes.

Another candidate trained at headquarters who has a good chance is "Premier." He is a four-year-old colt, and Black Jester out in the same company.

MY RONALD'S BIG CHIMES.

The colt started his winning career as a two-year-old, and his owner has been very careful not to ask too much of him.

As the owner is Mr. L. B. Barton, who has been as fortunate on the Turf as he has been as fortunate in the Rupert of the Turf, it is certain that fields will be affected.

The turf is not as bad as it was a week ago, and the ground is hard it is certain no risk will be taken.

The ground is hard it is certain no risk will be taken.

In the event of King Prinie not starting I shall look for the success of My Prince, as Cheek and Black Jester form the pick.

Morris, of course, may get noted on the last named, but the first appearance of Flamborough will be awaited with interest.

THE NEWMARKET STAKES.

It has been decided not to start Turfle at the Newmarket Stakes to-morrow, but at 2.30 P.M. at 200 guineas.

The most interesting event of the day will be the King's Plate, and King Prinie will run, but I fear he has not yet been definitely decided that Alan Prinie will run, and in any case it is hard it is certain no risk will be taken, though if started I should be satisfied with him.

In the event of King Prinie not starting I shall look for the success of My Prince, as Cheek and Black Jester form the pick.

San Yat will make his first appearance of the season in the Newmarket Handicap, and though he may be given weight away to all the others, it is certain that fields will be affected.

METTENTS THE WAR WILL STOP.

The North-East Coast Agricultural Association yesterday received an offer from the Jockey Club to dispense with their desire to stop racing and to assist them in as many ways as possible.

The committee, representing Newcastle, Stockton, and Redcar, and representing the neighbouring mining towns in the area, also handed arms to the committee.

TRY THIS HOME-MADE COUGH REMEDY.

Easy to Make and Costs Little.

Here is a fine cure for coughs that was published several times last winter, and which has been very successful. It is more effective than anything you can buy already prepared.

For a cough, dissolve 2 oz. of flour in 1 pt. of hot water and 4 oz. of molasses, stir until sugar is dissolved. This will give instant relief, and will usually cure coughs in a day. If the cough is due to cold chills, then it is a splendid tonic, for it absorbs through the skin. Take it in the morning and evening. This is a splendid remedy for the home. Good either for children or adults.

This plan of making cough medicine for the home is very successful, and many parents have become very popular during the last four years, and thousands of people know its value.

Every person suffering with a cough should give this a chance. There is no side effect, which makes it well worth trying. A small quantity will cure a cough and will be a safeguard against infectious diseases.

Dr. Hughes started his clerical life as a clerk in an orange merchant's office.

TO PUT ON FLESH AND INCREASE WEIGHT.

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE.

Most people eat from four to six pounds of good stuff every day and yet end the year no heavier. The thing is to increase your weight in weight and not increase in weight one ounce, while on the other hand, many of the pugilists who eat very light and keep all the time, is all right to say that this is the nature of the individual.

It isn't Nature's way at all.

This is the case because their powers of assimilation are defective. They still little show of the one in maintaining life and not the semblance of health and strength. Stuffing won't do it, it simply fills the belly, and unless the body has gained a single "stay there" point, all the fat will simply accumulate and in time unless they pass off as waste, and for the body to be fat, you can get it. You must keep pure those fatty food elements so that their blood circulation and drain them all through the body—something, too, that will multiply their red blood cells, and set the heart in their proper carrying power.

A condition I always recommend a Sargel tablet with every meal. Sargel is not, but is a combination of six of the most effective ingredients, including Guarana, Ashwagandha, Crocus, and Rhizoma. It stimulates the appetite, is slightly laxative, and acts as a tonic effect, which makes it very good in case of nervousness. It is also a good aid to digestion, has a fine run, or down, for old people who are taking in food. If you are not normal weight, suffer from indigestion, Iet me see a Sargel tablet with a few weeks and see what happens.

THE DARDANELLES FIGHT.

With this reinforcement the thin khaki line held on throughout the night, and the Turks were driven off with heavy loss.

On the following day more troops were landed on W beach, and the whole line joining up with the trench on X beach was able to move forward and get across the peninsula. The landing on V beach will remain the more memorable for the novel experiment of using the landing craft as a mass of troops deliberately ashore. This allowed the troops to approach in under cover without being exposed, as is the case in the open boat. Great doors were cut in the sides to allow of a rapid unloading. Wooden gangways were slung from steps built down from these doors to the bow, so that men could pass down the single file in single file, and either jump into the water if the sea was too deep to walk or to the lighter tied with them.

FORT ON THE RUBBLE.

The line's bridge was made up of steel plates, and the Maxima, protected by the heavily-gunned cannoneers, and manned by the Maxima section of the Naval Division, were landed in the bow and lower tier to sweep the shore when the troops landed.

Over 2,500 men were steered on board when at last the first rapid bombardment from the battleship Albion, the River Clyde slowly steamed toward the land.

She was protected by the usual eight town of twelve-inch guns, and the survivors, and wounded crawled behind this, which gave them time to put up their bills.

Meanwhile the River Clyde had gone ashore under the water in front of the town, and the four were landed, and the survivors took to the wood and the survivors took to the wood.

But this was not sufficient, and it was necessary to bring the lighter to the shore, when the troops on board could attempt to disembark.

RISKED CERTAIN DEATH.

One gallant volunteer ventured to get a line ashore and help the lighter in position. They ran down the gangway under a hail of bullets, kept on the top ever, and from there they ran on into the wood and reached the reef of rock which turns out from the sea.

Here they held the lighter in position and called on the soldiers to leave the ship.

The troops on board knew all about certain dangers, and they knew too, and the survivors, and wounded crawled behind this, which gave them time to put up their bills.

Some were shot on the gangway, others were killed as they reached the beach, others, others, and many of the survivors so quickened the beach, they fell.

A few only survived, and lay under the shelter of the wood.

It was seen that it would mean annihilation to the troops, and the attempt to disembark was made. The troops had to turn all further movement until after dark, and then to get to the Vedette by 6 a.m. From 12 o'clock the enemy opened again up a furious fusillade, sweeping the whole beach, but the survivors, and wounded crawled behind this, which gave them time to put up their bills.

At 12 o'clock the enemy again opened up a furious fusillade, sweeping the whole beach, but the survivors, and wounded crawled behind this, which gave them time to put up their bills.

On Monday morning a further advance through the ruined village was tried. On the left the attack was held on the machine gun in one of the two at the town, and the men had again to take cover over the ridge. Commonly dismissed with her gun.

11 0'clock the enemy opened again up a furious fusillade, sweeping the whole beach, but the survivors, and wounded crawled behind this, which gave them time to put up their bills.

We must not let it be that they are there and the survivors, and wounded crawled behind this, which gave them time to put up their bills.

Mr. Joseph Summer, the evangelist, was one of the victims of Germany's example of barbarism at the Medway. He was killed by the landing craft which was hit by one of the incendiary bombs and was destroyed. Despite his 90 years of preaching in Southend the previous day.

WHO LIFTED THE LID OFF OF HELL?"

Elbert Hubbard Falls Victim To The Man He Denounced.

"THE SHRUNKEN-SOLEAU KRAISER."

Germans will feel no regret that Elbert Hub­ bard, the American writer, is among the vic­ tims of the latest German measures, for Elbert Hub­ bard wrote consistently and fearlessly against Germany and the Kaiser. His work was widely popular in the United States, and he died not so much by the hands of any other man in America as to spread symp­ pathy with the Allies race.

He was visiting England and France to get inside knowledge of the brutal German methods of making war when he met his death by one of the most atrocious examples of those methods. His wife, who wrote under the name of Elbert Hubbard, was drowned with him.

Elbert Hubbard's reply to the German war to passengers not to embark on the Lusitania was piled on the man—"No doubt they would like to get rid of me after all, but it's too late now."

MADE IN GERMANY."

"My little bedkins," writes Elbert Hubbard at the end of last year, base him on front page in glowing red letters the title "Who Lifted the Lid Off Of Hell?" above the figure of Mephistopheles. On the back page was a picture of the Kaiser and the assertion: "This is made in Germany."

A strange picture shows the vigour of Elbert Hub­ bard's denunciation of the Kaiser:

-If anyone asks, "Who lifted the lid off of hell?" let the truthful answer be, "William Robertsons."

-He never wore a letter or a message wherein he could not at any time see that the Creator was in the waiting in the lobby—"with us."

He was abroad degenerate of a noble grand.

-He is swollen like a drenched pug with a pride of the Kaiser's pack."

He would carry a gun is taken from world war when the Kaiser will win."

We are told the Kaiser kept the peace for forty years.

True—just waiting for this stroke at world domination."

-My Kaiser will win."

"He has a brash and a mind that does not care."

-He will not craze our rapidly-degenerate of a noble grand.

-He is swollen like a drenched pug with a pride of the Kaiser's pack."

I SPENT a most enjoyable evening behind the notepaper. It's been a long time since I've so many times been in front, but never behind, so perhaps that accounts for my happy time there.

Miss Mary Ridley was able to spare me a few moments, was my next and pleasant visit. Miss Ridley came into the cast after Lord and Lady Headfort were staying with her. It was a fairly deep sympathy, and it's the seventh year, to see anybody one wanted to.

The Duchess of Sutherland had been running three nights at the Lord and Lady Headfort's in the Scottish Women's Hospitals for Foreign Service are sending out as their third gift to Serbia. One 2700 has already been assembled, largely from wives, working woman, and other club members. One of two shifts, was a private of the Cheshire Regiment, who wished to make some return for the kindness that had been shown to her in the French hospital.

There are 200,000 in military centres, which have recently been supplied with special batch of girls by England have sent their dearest treasures to be sold for the fund. Among these, a series of entertainments in Scotland, which have been spending a great deal of time in Ireland, since the outbreak of the war.

Lord Braynes is one of the most beautiful and generous men, and her husband was fairly regarded as the handsomest man in the Army. As I suppose I suppose they still hold the palm for hands.

Work For Serbia.

Lady Cowdray and the Countess Braynes are both working very hard just now to secure the funds for the new League of Nations, and the Scottish Women's Hospitals for Foreign Service are sending out as their third gift to Serbia. One 2700 has already been assembled, largely from wives, working woman, and other club members. One of two shifts, was a private of the Cheshire Regiment, who wished to make some return for the kindness that had been shown to her in the French hospital.

The schoolchildren's pennies were another charming feature, of the subscription list, and indeed, they have run into many pounds. People from all over the country have sent their dear treasures to be sold for the fund, and she has two that she have been particularly attractive—lollipops and gold pins with quaint charms and a magnifying glass.

CONCERNING PERIODICALS.

One penny upw...dwards. The Duchess of Sutherland has already promised to provide 1,000,000 for the fund. Among these, a series of entertainments in Scotland, which have been spending a great deal of time in Ireland, since the outbreak of the war.

Three effects, which so often disfigure an otherwise beautiful face, are frequently considered the most annoying of all, but I am of the opinion that these are a totally wrong impression, for the rings are simply due to the insufficient circulation in the skin area beneath the eyes. A person who has a chronically tired, and generally a sickly and nervous, quickly present visible evidence of these effects.

The eyes should be bathed night and morning with cold water, and a cold compress, and a correct for defective glasses there is nothing so certain for fatigue as a change of glasses. The best glasses can be taken twice a day before meals. If the increase of these effects is partly due to the formation of fumes. Any chemist would have observed that these glasses produce the disinclination to the eyes.

Some of the glasses in question, however, are nutriment preparations, which render it far better than any medicines prescribed at high prices, and widely advertised for the same purpose.

Australians wounded in their famous attack in the Dardanelles land fight.

The magnificent courage of the Australian troops in the landing on the shores of the Dardanelles has added another glorious page to the history of our Colonial soldiers. Like the Canadians at St. Julien the Australians refused to retire even when subjected to the most terrible fire. — (Daily Sketch Exclusive Photographs.)
