DUBLIN IN FLAMES: Exclusive Daily Sketch Photographs Taken Under Fire.

The captors of a rebel flag. Emblazoned on the green silk are the words: "Irish Republic."

Troops behind a barricade ready to repel a rebel attack.

This photograph, with others on this page, was taken under fire by a Daily Sketch staff photographer. It shows Sackville-street as it was on Thursday night, when the rebels were in possession of the city, and the buildings in the famous thoroughfare were in flames. Silhouetted against the glare, in the background, is Nelson's Column.

Soldiers replying to the fire of the insurgents. While this photograph was being taken the bullets from the rebel rifles were flattening themselves against the buildings shown in the picture. One of the officers is seen directing the fire of his men.
THE REAL SECRET OF THE IRISH REBELLION.

Sinn Fein Enthusiasts Doped
By The Larkinites.

"SAVIOUR OF IRELAND."

Loud-Mouthed Agitator Who Would Like To Be President.

From Our Special Correspondents.

DUBLIN, Monday Evening.

Now that the rebellion in Dublin has ended one is able to gather more reliable news as to who is responsible for this pitiful futile revolt.

Many of the garrison were women. They had been fighters, and carried rifles. They wore no shirts, but had men's uniforms, including trousers and petticoats, with the usual black feather. They carried the Irish flag. The majority of them is nauseated due to the use of a certain drug.

It was said that the garrison has received orders to surrender, and they have been ordered to surrender.

The officer replied: "Certainly, your wish will be complied with." Turning round to an orderly, he instructed him to bring a priest. "That's the best counsel in the world for you." It was during the surrender of Kelly that a pathetic incident occurred. The soldiers had been ordered to surrender, but they were not going to be put to death without being taken first. After Kelly's capture, some commotion was caused a little further up the street.

ONLY BOYS.

The soldiers were quickly on the spot. They were armed with lances of four iron lances, taking off their green caps.

A number of women made a ring round the block to shelter each other from the revolver and rifle fire.

The women quickly arrested the rebel leaders, but it was too late. A mass of debris, consisting of four walls, was the favourite ejaculator. The women were fully aware of their situation, although there were no pictures, or the fate awaiting them there, but the women were able to resist heavy patrols. Neither the populace nor the prisoners had any idea of their destination across the line of fire.

SOLDIERS WITHDRAWN.

All the police and military have been drawn, and the spectators have been permitted to roam without let or hindrance.

Larkin's idea of the rebellion is quite different. He believes it was the irruption of the people's will, and that it was forced on them.

LARKIN, THE SAVIOUR.

Larkin, I was told by a well-known Dublin Nationalist, is an unconscious Syndicalist who believes he is the "Saviour of Ireland." This idea has cultivated since his rise to notoriety in connection with the Dublin strike.

The war came, and Larkin saw the possible realisation of his ambition—to become first President of an Irish Republic. He had secured a great many Nationalists and Ulstermen in addition to his own rabble.

Larkin and Sinn Fein are enthusiastic workers for "Irish for the Irish," and an overwhelming majority of them is nauseated with Larkinism and all that it means.

This was made apparent during the last few days. Over 1,000 Sinn Feiners surrendered to the military authorities, and the soldiers said to the soldiers: "Sure, and we were served a dirty trick. We didn't want to be served in this way." And just as true.

A GARRISON OF WOMEN.

On the other hand the Larkinites are still fighting—sniping. They are filled with blood lust. But one of these men can kill two or three English soldiers before he is himself killed, then he is satisfied.

One of the last of the rebel positions to surrender was the Royal College of Surgeons, which was the residence of Dr. Michael Collins.
IMMEDIATE COMPULSION FOR ALL: ZEPPELINS LAST NIGHT

SINGLE BILL TO END PIECEMEAL RECRUITING.
Married Men Are Wanted, Attested Or Not.

COMPULSION FOR ALL.
Unattested Men Can Be Spared From Industry.

PLEA FOR UNITY.
In order to get rid of the recruiting controversy "once for all," Mr. Asquith announced the following important Government measure, which will be brought forward by Mr. Balfour yesterday afternoon:

- General and immediate compulsion.
- Unattested married men are included in the field of compulsion.
- They are required by the military necessities of the nation.
- No more piecemeal recruiting. Unattested married men can be spared from essential industries. They cannot be obtained by existing compulsion.
- Bill to legalise these proposals to be introduced to-day.

Mr. Asquith made a stirring plea for national unity, and rebuked the critics who had attacked the Government at a time when its contribution to the common cause was greater and better directed than it had ever been.

The Government were prepared to shoulder these great responsibilities so long as they retained the confidence of the House and the country.

If they had not that confidence, let the House say so.

SPEECHES SUMMARISED.

SIR EDWARD CARSON.
No one doubted that this country had made gigantic efforts, but the question was what we had done but had we done enough? He was glad they were going to have a Bill to settle the question.

SIR JOHN SIMON.
The grounds on which the Bill was founded were such that they could not change their compulsion, due to the wisdom of introducing compulsion. He agreed that the Bill was the logical consequence of the Bill of last January, and that the military condition of the Allies was never so good as it was to-day.

SIR F. CAWLEY.
As Sir John Simon had declared, he believed in one man one vote, but he also believed in one man one rifle.

M. J. H. THOMAS.
He hoped there would be no Labour trouble as a result of the Government's policy, but if they went in to lobby against the Bill.

M. G. B. STANTON.
Left alone, away from men like Mr. Thomas, Labour would be as loyal as any section of the community.

EMPIRE'S FIVE MILLIONS.
Mr. Asquith Explains Why More Men Are Wanted.

In opening the debate the Prime Minister made a frank and manly statement, well received in all parts of the House, except by the small anti-compulsory group.

Last week's Bill, he said, was intended to deal with the question of recruiting in instalments. That plan did not meet with approval. The Government therefore decided to invite the House to deal without delay with all sides of the recruiting problem in a single measure. (Cheers.) He thought it right before that measure was introduced to summarise in public some of the reasons he gave it private last week for the necessity of their main demand.

In August, 1915, our Army consisted of 60 Divisions, including 24 Territorial divisions at home, in addition to pensions over the war which might

DOUBLE GERMAN FAILURE ON BRITISH FRONT.

Attacks Near Ypres And Arva Stopped By Fire.

British Official News.

GENERAL HEADQUARTERS, FRANCE.

Tuesday, 10.30 p.m.
A German attack east of Ypres last night proved abortive. The enemy broke into our lines. Another attempt by the German Army to have its lines retaken was stopped by fire.

To-day there has been some artillery activity near Monarchies. There was fighting between Vervins and Vernoille, opposite Wytschate, and east of Arva.

As the result of a combat in the air yesterday two hostile aeroplanes were driven down in a field near Ypres. The day was a successful one for our Army and all our troops were safe.

2 GERMAN TRENCHES TAKEN.

By 1,000 Yards On The Dead Man, 500 Yards Near Douaumont.

French Official News.

PARIS, Tuesday afternoon.
West of the Meuse (Paris side) artillery activity continued yesterday from the wood between the region to the Dead Man. East of the Meuse (L'Aisne side), at the end of yesterday our troops earned a lively attack against enemy posts near the east end of Douaumont Fort.

In the course of the operation we occupied a German first line trench for a length of about 500 yards near the Meuse, and were on our way to land a short distance behind the German lines.

RELATIVELY QUIET DAY.

In Champagne the bombardment by our artillery of a German fortress near Montmort (north of Aincourt) caused several explosions and a fire. Another battery which was fought by us to the north of Maisselle suffered serious damage.

In the Argonne the mission continued to our advantage on the 12th of this month. No troops were killed and 18 wounded.

The enemy in a hopeless position, where the brave, had to surrender. Amongst the killed was our inspector, two sergeants, and a district inspector.

SHIREWOOD FORESTERS' LOSSES.

Apparently the heavy losses of the Foresters were inflicted on their advance through Balla Bridge from Kingstown to Dublin.

The enemy were killed and wounded in the attack from the grounds of an institution. A machine gun was brought up and summary vengeance was taken.

MORE DUBLIN CASUALTIES.

Last night the War Office issued the first list of the men killed and wounded in the Dublin fighting.

Two men are reported killed—a lance-corporal, a Boots Guardman, and a private in the Royal Irish Regiment, and the wounded include 10 mounted men and three infantrymen.

COURTESIES ON THE TIGRIS.

Turkish Commander Agrees To Exchange Sick And Wounded Prisoners.

From The War Office.

Tuesday evening.

General Lake reported that the troops which moved out of Basrah (Persian Gulf) on Saturday had landed a small force into the Tigris and were entrenched in the vicinity.

Our troops were quietly driven off and our troops were taken by the enemy.

The enemy consisted of a British officer killed and a native Indian trooper wounded, and a British officer wounded and a native Indian in the Tigris. The officer has been received from the Turkish Commanding Officer and is reported to have been seriously wounded.

General Lake has been asked by the Turkish Commanding Officer to return the wounded prisoners. Hospital and other ships have been PRACTICAL PRESCRIPTION AGAINST STOMACH ACIDITY.

BY A SPECIALIST.

"Nine-tenths of all cases of stomach troubles nowadays," says a leading specialist, "are caused by too much acid. In the beginning the stomach itself is not diseased, but the acid condition is allowed to continue, the acid is very likely to eat into the stomach walls and produce stomach ulcers or cancer, either of which may render a radical surgical operation necessary, even to prolong life. Therefore an "acid stomach" is really a dangerous condition and should be treated seriously. It is utterly useless to take pepсин and ordinary stomach lotions. The excess acid must be neutralised by the administration of an efficient antacid. For this purpose physicians nearly always recommend taking half a teaspoonful of bicarbo.. nitric magne... ia in a little water after each meal. Larger quantities may be used if necessary, as it is absolutely harmless. But be sure to get the bicarbonate of magnesia, as other forms of magnesia have not the same effect.

Therefore an antacid is necessary, as this acid condition is not useless to take.

E. BURGESS, 59, Gray's Inn Road, London, W.C.
THE moment I anticipated has come, and I have expressed my belief that any attempt to stampede the Government into all-round compulsion would agree to such a proposition willingly enough if Mr. Asquith had the courage to do so, but he has done so. Speaking as the mouthpiece of the Cabinet, he tells us that the services of the men who have been rendered manacled by the military necessities of the situation, that the requisite number could not be otherwise obtained, and that these men could not be taken.

AFTER such plain speaking there is nothing more to be said, there is no possible argument against compulsion. The men are needed, they are taken.

We now see how important it was that Mr. Asquith should dissociate himself altogether from the supporters of compulsion for consideration's sake. That is, therefore, why we are so confident that he in no way exaggerates the military needs of the hour, not least when he affirms that the only way of satisfying those needs is enlist compulsorily all untested men.

NOT for an instant do we regret that compulsion has been delayed until now. Nor do we object to those five million men and navy recruits—nearly all of them volunteers. We know how much more we have to learn from the consequences of a war that a raw recruit army could never have done what our raw volunteers have done.

Yes, we are very proud of those men; we are even more proud of the fact that the burden of the war has been borne by a volunteer army. But now we want more men, and quickly.

And in the invariable opponent of conscription (and that I have always been) what we are to do. Are we to lose the war rather than force those men to enlist? And what is the risk losing the war rather than force those men to enlist? You think compulsion is a risk to the liberties of the people? And what is the risk losing the war rather than force those men to enlist?

THIS Bill introduces no new principle. No one—men are already compelled to serve; the Bill merely applies in a general way a prejudice.
How the Soldiers Barricaded and Held the Streets

Soldiers bivouacking in the street opposite Liberty Hall were a centre of silent interest to an aweled crowd. It was the first moment’s breathing space the lads in khaki had had since reaching Dublin.

A group of officers with the captured rebel flag. The trophy, taken from the roof of the General Post Office in Sackville-street, bore the symbol of the Irish Republic of the Sinn Feiners’ fordoomed dreams.

Only the gaunt, gaping walls and massive portico remain of the em of Sackville-street. It was here that Connolly and his followers general Post Office which had for years been an architectural feature, barricaded windows, put up such a desperate fight.

Soldiers lining a street barricade. Furniture of all sorts and shapes and sizes, including a drawing-room sofa, had been hastily thrown into the roadway for defensive purposes.

Both sides of Henry-street, a thoroughfare converging on Sackville-street, have suffered heavy damage by fire. A dozen shops on the west side were completely gutted. The Coliseum music-hall was also shattered.

Overturmed lorries and carts provided the troops with a barricade shelter in Talbot-street. So deadly was the accuracy of the rebel snipers with flat-nosed bullets that every shred of shelter that could be improvised was necessary.

Lady Gives Simple Home Recipe that She Used to Darken Her Grey Hair.

For years I tried to restore my grey hair to its natural colour with preparations of this kind, but none of them gave satisfaction, and they were all expensive. I finally came across a simple recipe which I mixed at home that gives wonderful results. I gave the recipe, which is as follows, to a number of my friends, and they are all delighted with it. To 7 ozs. of water add a small box of Griex Compound, and 1 oz. of bay rum. These ingredients can be bought at any chemist's at very little cost. Use every other day until the hair becomes the required shade, then every two weeks. It will not only darken the grey hair, but removes dandruff and scalp humours, and acts as a tonic to the hair. It is not sticky or greasy, does not rub off and does not colour the scalp. -Mrs.

THE 2,000 GUINEAS.
Expected To Take A Good Horse To Beat Figaro.

A TREBLE FOR TABOR.

Today is the big day with the title of the Two Thousand Guineas. Many good horses are entered for the race, and it should provide some excellent sport. The following are the probable starters and their odds:

Cyril: 5/2
Rose: 3/1
Rock: 4/1

The view held at Newmarket is that it will take a very strong horse to defeat Figaro, but many think that the outsider coming third, is a very nice colt, and will be well worth a bet at the third.

Bad Day For backers.

It was a bad day for backers yesterday, following the close of the market with almost unanimous regularity. The most surprising of the day was when Margaret beat Tagamor in the head money.

Margaret, a filly, beat Tagamor in the head money.

This race provided as fine a struggle as has been seen for some time, and the strain of the strenuous struggle from the Dip, and neither jockey nor horse showed any signs of the previous heat.

Margaret: Pecked a hundred yards from home, but was never headed after that. She was quite well, and advantage taken of Tagamor's half-brother at the post.

The second was joint favourite, but the winner was a little disappointing to the people who believed in the opinion that she was not yet at her best.

A BEAUTIFUL Filly.

A beautiful filly, named by Sunnar to Atalbing, the oldest son, by Desmon, who finished third, is a very nice colt, and will win races.

Still he was made favourite, and had a good chance of coming first, only there was a chance to the argument, and it is to be feared that he has no chance at all.

Valsee was probably an unlucky loser, for he had every chance of coming first, but he ran out of.toString.

Tabor had an excellent day, turning out three winners, and was one of the best in the Two Thousand Guineas Trial Plate at the Newmarket Trials on Saturday, while the Visitor's Handicap, while later secured the Corbory Plate with Medallor, who started favourite. J. Clark rode with a superb finish.
