MARTIAL LAW FOR ALL IRELAND.

Major-General Sir John Maxwell photographed at Suvla. He has received plenary powers to suppress the insurrection in Ireland.

Mr. Redmond and Sir Edward Carson yesterday joined hands in denouncing the rebellion. This photographic prophecy of the Daily Sketch has thus again been realised in a political action of vital significance.

An infamous German pamphlet circulated in Ireland. Irish soldiers have answered it on the battlefield, and yesterday Sir Edward Carson and Mr. John Redmond reaffirmed the loyalty of Ireland as a whole.

Redmond's flag is now the Union Jack, and not merely that of the Nationalist Volunteers. On the left is seen his son, Captain Willie Redmond, M.P.
NEW COMPULSION BILL DIES A FEW HOURS AFTER INTRODUCTION.

GOVERNMENT MEASURE THAT HAD NO FRIENDS.

Killed Three Hours After Introduction.

MR. ASQUITH BOWS TO THE INVITABLE.

"The Obvious Course Will Be To Withdraw It."

The Government's new Compulsion Bill, the fruit of the Secret Session of Parliament, is already dead.

It was withdrawn scarcely three hours after its introduction in the House of Commons yesterday by Mr. Walter Long. And its early defeat was due largely to the fact that the Government would not press the introduction of the Bill.

As the Bill had no friends, and possessed no merits, he thought the obvious course would be to withdraw it.

In introducing the Bill, Mr. Long said:

It was a necessary measure of little surprise in the Parliamentary Lodges.

Such strong hostility was shown on all sides, by the speeches made, that it appeared no provisions whatever had been made to press the Bill. It was evident that the Bill would not get a hearing in the Commons.

And the Government could not have pressed the introduction of the Bill.

The only course for the Government was to withdraw it, and to consider what steps it could take to secure a settlement of the dispute.

Mr. Asquith said:

"The Bill is a necessary measure, but it is not a Bill that will receive the support of the House."
IRISH SWEEP GERMANS FROM TRENCHES AT LOOS

Heavy Fighting Along The British Front.

BEDFORDS' BRILLIANT RAID.

Huns Driven Into Their Dug-Outs And Bombed There.

GAS ATTACKS AVOID THE ENEMY NOTHING.

British Official News.

General Headquarters, France, Thursday, 11 a.m.

Last night the Bedfordshire Regiment carried out a very successful raid near Mametz.

The raiding party rushed trenches, and after fierce hand-to-hand fighting drove the remaining Germans into their dug-outs and bombed them there.

Our casualties were eight wounded, all brought in.

Irish loss was considerable.

NEW BATTLE FOR HILL 60.

South of Frictonville the enemy entered our trenches at 2 p.m. yesterday, and over our whole front_of the trench, but was immediately driven by a counter-attack.

Last night, after heavy bombardment, followed by the explosion of a mine, the enemy attacked our trenches on Hill 60, but was repulsed.

At the same time the enemy gained a footing on the left of Hill 60, but was driven out by our bombers.

Our trenches west of Zillebeke and north-east of Hill 60, and those in rear, were heavily shelled from 6 p.m. to midnight.

An attack was made.

To-day hostile artillery has been active against our trenches south-west of St. Eloi.

IN-AND-OUT AGAIN.

Last night the enemy came out of one of our craters in the Höhenzollern section, but were driven back.

During the night the enemy sprang mines south-east of Souches, north-east of the Double Nancy, northwest of Hulluch, and south of Hulluch. We sprang a mine in Hulluch sector.

This morning at 5.10 a.m. the enemy attacked our trenches south of Hulluch, and at the same time put an artillery barrage on our lines in the south-west of Hill 60.

At 7.30 a.m. a second gas cloud was released from about the same place, and after a heavy bombardment we were engaged in front and support lines east-north-east of Loos.

FAUN-AND-BALLAGH!

Counter-attack by our Irish troops took place within half an hour, and the enemy were driven out leaving many dead in their trenches.

The enemy also advanced from their trenches just south of Hulluch, but that attack was repulsed by our troops, and many corpses were left in front of our trenches. A few Germans reached our lines, but were driven out.

Hostile artillery has been active during the day against our trenches about Carency, Souches, Lons Brocas, and Fesse 2 de Braquemont.

Mr. Lloyd George On His Defence.

Mr. Lloyd George is to address his Constituents at Conway on Saturday.

It is expected to be one of the most important speeches of his career.

A verbatim report will appear in the "Sunday Chronicle" on SUNDAY NEXT.

1d. ALL NEWSPREST. 1d.
Their main objective was frightfulness.

... points about the British character, though perative or to be counted in the weekly total. Obviously the need for soldiers may overweigh every politics to sympathis & with... doz n boxe to the War Office. It is telling this one:

Lord Winborne's Job.

"...you yesterday that Mr. Birrell should be displaced... but see that various people are taking up the idea and calling for all sorts of things... Lord Kitchener to Ireland as Detractor and the removal of Lord Winborne. Let's keep our heads, they're scared..."

...Ireland has always been a difficult, dangerous, and expensive business. The Irish Army... four had an exciting time of it in the eighties, but still Mr. Birrell's experiences, if he is allowed to, will be even more thrilling.

Not in Naval Costume.

Mr. Arthur Balfour is a strange personality. When he comes out of his shell the whole world is interested. But he doesn't seem to care about anything. The other day I met him in Chancery Lane, and his appearance was so dignified that the old soldiers can be called up when wanted...)

At Monte Carlo

A wounded officer who has just returned from convalescing at Monte Carlo tells me that it is no mean restaurant and has many clever tricks up its sleeve. Formerly a man of many capricious mighty, he is now a man of many capricious designs. He has bought a yacht..."

Sang The Wrong Song.

...the same as the riotous comedy about the efforts of the corrosive Casement to tamper with the loyalty of some Irish prisoners of war. In the end, very few, very few, was successful. Two Irish Tommies whom he had persuaded themselves that they could trust, and with the money in their pockets. This last they spent in overdoses of German beer, and, forgetting their task, they were caught. This is coming a Berlin street singing "God Save the King."

Curious Incidence.

Here's a curious coincidence. A few years ago Violet Loraine, who has made a name for herself in the present Almamatter revue, was in Australia, playing principal boy in a pantomime. She was performing there... But of course, as a result of this, the public and the critics. Suddenly an Anzac leaped on the cab and exclaimed, "Why not send your daughter by post." He had been through the country for ten shillings."

How Does He Do It?

I saw Lord Lansdowne at a revue the other night. War or peace, he doesn't change a bit, or get a day older. But his long coat ever get shorter. I believe he must light a fresh one every few minutes, and chuck it away when it has ever so slightly diminished. And how he manages to get white gardenias for his buttonhole all the year round I cannot imagine.

Ready For The Theatre Tax.

...the last brutal tax: theatre ticket. It is an orchestra stall, and just alongside the usual seat, a bit more back by post. That is the smallest Government tax, one shilling.

Hats And Socialism.

Mr. G. D. F. L.P. conference in New- castle is, I am told, doubtful about the wisdom of "all things in common." Its purchased a nice value for this thing; but when it comes to show how smartly dressed even a "intellectually" may be so. But some ambitious-minded com- promise of all socialists."

I hear that United States Army offices are being given the tip to come on the States. There is going to be such a slump in by-pens as never. And some blockade.

KING EDWARD VII. MEMORIAL HOSPITAL.
MODERN SUBSTITUTES FOR THE CRINOLINE.

Very few women are wearing the wire cages of a generation back to keep their full skirts standing out. The modern substitutes for the crinoline are many and varied. One effect is got by firm piping cords or by horsehair stiffening in the hem. Casings are being made in washed frocks, and into these will be slipped a boning that can be removed when the frock goes to the laundry. A method to ensure the flare and the one that will be adopted by most women is that of hemming a separate petticoat which has a shaped bounce of stiff material starting from the knees. Such a petticoat may be worn under various frocks in turn, and the dressmaker is spared the stiffening of each one. There are too many busy women nowadays for the houppette silhouette to become universal, and in the summer we shall probably see even the wearers of thin frocks disposing with stiffening and looking like "folded butterflies." As the very few women who witnessed the fashion of the crinoline long ago were prettily called.

The importance of being striped.

To be quite in line with the early summer fashions you must have something striped in your wardrobe, even if it is only a hat. A yellow and white striped linen hat with a yellow stripe rounded the crown is an effective model and will suggest to the home dressmaker the possibilities of getting an extra yard or two of material when buying her washing frocks and covering a buckram shape to match. Striped sports coats are already with us, and later on will come the striped parasol. All materials, from flimsy chiffon to heavy flannel, will be subject to stripes, and the stripes will be used in many odd ways so that trimming is dispensed with. Yellow and white, which had a preliminary run last summer, will be an even more approved combination this year, and there will be many popular shades from lemon to corn colour.

Smart inspirations from the munition overall.

Some of the smartest of the linen frocks are originally inspired by the munition overall, being cut in a piece from shoulder to hem and left in as the waist by a belt of white nude. Frocks of this sort, simple as they look, must be cleverly cut and tailored to avoid slippiness. In one very attractive frock of yellow and white striped linen the under-arm portion of the frock is cut separately and the skirts pleated on to this at the hips. A plain turn-over collar of white linen, yellow linene buttons, and a yellow and patent leather belt are the details of this frock.

Coat frocks are just as charming in linen and alpaca as in serge, and the fact is sure to be demonstrated during the first warm days. For town wear in the early summer they are especially suitable, for the dress worn without a coat has to be very well chosen to look right in the street.

The "MIDDY" of 1916.

New Developments Of The Comfortable Sports Blouse.

The middy blouse, beloved of the holiday girl, takes on new phases each season, and does the sports coat, and girls who are already planning their summer wardrobes will be eager to hear what the middy of 1916 is like.

Linen and drill are no longer held to be the only appropriate materials for the middy. Heavy white Japanese silk and crépe-de-chine are used for the new models, and sometimes relieved by collars and belts of some bright colour. Crêpe-de-chine is quite a practical material for this purpose, as it washes easily, is cool, and does not crease so readily as linen.

White And Purple.

A white crépe-de-chine model suggests a sports coat that pulls over the head instead of buttoning down the front, and has a sailor collar. This is of purple with a purple leather belt, which is only visible at the back and front, and the blouse hangs free at the sides.

Cape collars, in place of the usual sailor type, appear on the silk middy blouses, and smocking in coloured silk is also introduced.

One very attractive new model is of pale blue linen, with a black patent leather belt run through slots buttoned in black, and a black ribbon lacing at the throat through eyelets also worked in black. Black and light blue is a very cool-looking combination for hot days.

Braided Linen And Cretonne.

Cretonne and braided chintz make very gay sports blouses. A very successful cretonne model has collar, cuffs and belt of white linen, edged with bias trimming of narrow white braid. The stockinette of the new sort is an ideal material for the practical middy, as it does not give awkward bulging lines to the figure, but is at present rather costly.

Late summer frocks, or crepe to match are made for the new blouses—a fashion from Lille, which the clever-figured girl can copy at home.

LIARS IN LONDON.

There is quite an epidemic in London just now of stories about certain big things of the war which are being kept "secret," about our Generals, and about our Politicians. They are told in club and train, and the story-teller always gives his information as coming "from a friend in the War Office." A well-known writer will trace the origin of some of these stories, and have some trenchant things to say about the type of man who so readily accepts them.

NEWBURY RACING.

Prominent Greenham Stakes Candidates
There has been no race at Newbury for over a year, but it will be a pleasant surprise to see the Berkshire course, for there is no better appointed enclosure in the country.

The programmes for the two days are the same as at the ordinary spring fixtures, with the exception that the prizes have been reduced.

The Greenham Stakes is only of the advertised value of 500 guineas, but a good-class race has been assured, though the fact that the "Guineas" is to be decided in a week may have some effect on the site of the field.

Sir Digby, who can hardly hope to cope with Orlovsky, will be glad to make the latter the market terms than when they ran a dead heat in the Coven Stakes last spring.

Buckingham Park has by no means been benefited by that outing, and, taking a lot of beating today.

One of the best races at Newmarket, and Abbechas, who beat Anagrace and Cannabone among others, and, finishing second to Caryanda in a handicap, carrying topweight.

In any case there was more money in the performance of Foston, but I am not at all certain that he can get a better weight.

Duggan is reckoned to be something out of the common race, and is to win in the last of three.

Goodby, who is good on winning his first two races, only has a chance in the form of the winner, so I leave him to prove that he has regained his best form.

The Newmarket Fillies' and Ros, and Missa, I am told to confirm more from the latter, who won a trial last Saturday. She is certain to render a good account of herself.

Flaming Fire is the best of the others, but I give Missa a slight preference over Ros of Eton.

LITTLE NOTES ON "GENERAL" HISTORY

No. 5.—WAR SERVICES.

1857.

When the troops returned from the Crimean war many of the time-expired men were found so emaciated and cadaverous that they were engaged as drivers or conductors by the newly-formed "General" Company.

1900-02.

During the South African War 1,100 horses of the "General" stud were acquired by the army, and did good work in taking the guns of the artillery into action or hauling the wagons of the Army Service Corps across the veld. Over 350 "General" men served with the army.
