The latest messages from Ireland indicate that the Dublin rebels have surrendered, while their leader, James Connolly, has died of wounds. The wild scenes of the past week recall the savage horrors of the Commune. Just as Paris in the days of the Franco-Prussian War suffered more destruction at the hands of its own insurgents than from the enemy's bombardment so does Dublin to-day, with its blazing buildings, shattered street-barricades, and piles of wreckage, present as tragic a spectacle as if the city had

"SITUATION WELL IN HAND."

By Percival Phillips.

Dublin, Saturday Night.

I hear that a great part of the leaders among some of the leaders, has surrendered unconditionally in the Sackville-street area, and that their central organisation has been broken up.

There has been no firing since five o'clock, save for occasional sniping in other quarters of the city.

Dublin, Saturday Morning.

The rebel defences are perceptibly weakening.

There has been very little sniping this night.

This morning solitary rebel sharpshooters have fired at long intervals across the North Wall district from tenement houses in that quarter, and on Monday afternoon they directed a fire against the North Western railway buildings without doing any damage.

A cloud of smoke, which now invests the centre of the town, but the volume is far less than yesterday, and machine guns are only in action at long intervals.

REBEL TRENCHES SHelled.

During the night the rebel position in O'Connell Place was shelled and raided. A small force of relievers was able to be entrenched in that recessing ground in the Castle grounds. There is a considerable number of quarters of Dublin, and other associates of Larkin drilled the so-called "Citizen Army" before the morning.

The approach to the Four Courts-Sackville-street area is on the dispatch of my last message, a conflagration of great intensity raging in the immediate vicinity of the Nelson Pillar, which were quite merry, despite their four days of smoke.

Prisons and Imperial hotels are both in this locality, the first adorning the and the second the Post Office building. Last night's fire is still burning.

ARRIVAL OF MORE TROOPS. No news has been received south of the Liffey.

The arrival of additional troops from England has increased the confidence of the population.

The troops have been seen parading from the North Wall and adjoining quarter, north of the river, returning to their homes under military escort with bundles of fresh fish which had been apportioned among them at the quay. They were quite merry, despite their four days of imprisonment in their houses, and laughed and joked as the soldiers as they marched down the street.

Two explosions occurred inside the inner corridor of the Four Courts, which caused the destruction of buildings occupied by rebels.

The authorities say little more than that field artillery has been used in cases where it is otherwise impossible to dislodge the insurgents from their positions.

FIGHTING IN PROVINCES.

Troops Get Upper Hand in Galway; Rebels in Ruined Castle.

Dublin, Friday Night.

All day the work of rooting out the rebels has been proceeding steadily. As far as we know, the "Republican" headquarters is still in the Post Office, but there is the chance that it is a limited area.

Two cords of troops encircle Dublins, the north through the Post Office, the second around its heart.

Troops composing it are able to clear their way from one house to another.

There have been a number of casualties from snipers' bullets to-day, and ambulances were busy dashing from one dressing station to another.

The rebels in the Sackville-street Edon Quay area are in very irregular from the rebel side. Fresh fires broke out this afternoon in the Sackville-street-Eden Quay area.

Galway and Wexford are the only counties in which serious disturbances have occurred. In the former, the railway town has been the scene of fighting with rebel bands, but the upper portion of the town is now in hands of the rebels and a return was made to the town, where there are no confirmations of this, and officials say to-night that they believe the damage is very much less.

SITUATION WELL IN HAND.

The authorities are satisfied not only that the Dublin position is very strong, but that whatever event occurs in the provinces will not be effectually dealt with.

The Sackville area is a much more serious problem. The territory between Capel-street and the city, but that whatever event occurs in the provinces will not be effectually dealt with.

From Our Special Correspondent.

KNOXSWORTH, Saturday Night.

James Connolly, the Irish Republic's Special Leader, is reported dead from wounds. He was in the Post Office when it was attacked by the troops, and was shot through the thigh.

To-night as I leave there are strong rumours in the city that the rebels have unconditionally capitulated, and that the majority have been arrested, while the leaders are safely under lock and key in Dublin Castle.

Sackville-street has been seriously damaged, both sides of the road are reported to have been destroyed by fire and gun-fire.

Three bodies of the rebels at noon to-day, has been destroyed by fire and gun-fire.

As regards the situation in Dublin, the rebels from the areas Sackville-street, Post Office and Four Courts are surrendering freely.

More incendiary fires took place in Sackville-street last night, but the fire brigade has now been able to resume work.

It is further reported that up to the present time, 707 prisoners have been taken.

Included among these is the Countess Markiewiez.

The rebels at Enniscorthy were reported to be still in possession of this place, and a mixed column of cavalry, infantry and artillery, including 47-inch guns, had been sent from Wexford with a view to engaging the rebels.

The latest information from Enniscorthy shows that the rebel leader at this place does not believe in the rebel leader's message from Dublin, and has proceeded to that city in a motor car under escort to verify the information.

In the meantime a truce exists.

A deputation for a similar purpose from the rebels at Ashbourne has also been sent to Dublin.

In Galway the rebels are believed to be disbanding, and a few arrests have been made.

The situation at New Ross, Gorey, Wicklow, Bagnalstown and Arklow is reported to be normal.

Carlow and Dunlavin are believed to be quiet.

WOMEN AMONG THE REBELS.

Officers Alleged To Have Been Shot By Amazons.

It is officially announced that the Countess Markievicz, who was reported earlier to have been wounded while helping the rebels, has been taken prisoner.

Reports have referred to her as Russian.

Those who have followed the suffragette movement from its beginning know that she is really Irish, the sister of the Sligo baronet, Sir Jocelyn Gort-Booth, the poet, and militant suffragist.

The Countess has always been a spirited character, and kept open home in Dublin to the distressed and homeless.

She started the National Boy Scouts, and during the long strike organised Irish stew kitchens all over the city to feed the women and children.

Her husband, Count Casimir Markievicz, was very popular in Dublin, in the Aberdeen Castle set as well as among the art crowd. He went to fight for Russia at the beginning of the war, and has lost an arm.

From a conspicuous number of women fighting with the rebels, and some have been shot and others captured, declared a gentleman who arrived in London from Dublin yesterday morning.

They currently lack of young men, but there are a number of older ones among them.

I believe they have had training for the war, and have already shown their fighting spirit in the trenches and on the firing line.

RECIPE TO STOP DANDRUFF.

This home-made mixture stops dandruff and falling hair and aids its growth.

To a half-pint of water add:
Bay Rum ........................................... 1 oz.

Oriel Compound ................................. A small box.

These are simple ingredients that you can buy from any chemist at very little cost, and mix them yourself. Apply to the scalp once a day for two weeks, then once every other week until all the mixture is used. A half-pint should be enough to rid the head of dandruff and kill all the dandruff germs. It stops the hair from falling out, and relieves itching and scalp diseases.

Although it is not a dye, it acts upon the hair roots and will darken streaked, faded grey hair in 10 or 15 days. It promotes the growth of the hair and makes hair soft and glossy.

Such an appointment would be very popular at Westminster, and would be a fitting appreciation of the services of a man whose name is remembered since the war commenced. There will be very general sympathy with Sir John Maxwell in the fact that he will be relieved of the duties of the office since he has been ill for some time. It is to be hoped that he will soon be able to return to his work.

Why No Canada's Day?

Why was it that April 23—the anniversary of the first great achievement of the Canadians in the war—was not observed? Perhaps the Americans would have been as popular here as Anzac Day was.

As the world was again to the British for the sake of having a good time ("the rehearsals are such fun, my dear") it is little short of a scandal.

Harry Tate Going To America

I fear that George Robey, who is magnificent in the Alhambra, cannot stay on in London, and his company is to go to America for some time, and I believe that, when he returns, he will get a cheque cashed in hard, British gold. A friend of mine, just returned from God's Own Country, told me that, just as the word"s are pronounced so theatricals are organised solely for the purpose of enabling Lady This or Mrs. Something That to dispense expensive on the stage, and that the company is to be acted, sometimes with real actors and actresses. There are some clever amateurs, but very, very few, and even at that, I believe in the case of the sake of having a good time ("the rehearsals are such fun, my dear") it is little short of a scandal.

A most remarkable, unprecedented, extraordinary, and altogether amazing thing happened at the Munster Matinee at the Queen's Theatre on Monday. Monday, for the show proper (if proper) was over Jimmy Welsh held an auction for the fund, and, owing to his persuasive eloquence, it raised as much as if not more than any other person could have done.

As to things I mean, unfortunately, money. And there are many, among the various coins and notes and all things, the most absurd.

You remember sovereign round, hard, yellow things.

My debt to you is not to be repaid. There are plenty of sovereigns in New York and America generally. Not, of course, in circulation, but in banking and commercial circles it isn't a difficult thing to get.

In the Park.

The sun brought many people to the Park yesterday, but the church parade was more a sight, with the seats than a promenade. STAMP OUT THE POCKET-MONEY-WAGE GIRL.

What Women Clerks Must Do To Make Their Position Secure After The War.

By ISABEL BASNETT, Secretary Of The Association Of Women Clerks And Secretaries.

CLERICAL work is a profession for which it has always been considered a large class of people that training is almost, if not quite, unnecessary.

In the eyes of a certain class of girl, the one who for her own and others' advantage should never enter into this class of work, it is a "genteel" profession conferring a certain distinction, easily picked up, and one of the hardest tasks before the trained efficient woman clerk is to educate this class of girl into understanding that false standards equably with bad work pull down the character of the worker and re-act dastardly on the particular class of labour.

The trained worker has also to educate this class of girl into the further understanding that training is absolutely essential for two principal reasons—

1. That the reason why the standard rates of pay for many classes of clerical work are scandalously low is because of the immense number of untrained girls on the market.

2. That clerical work holds out no prospects to the girl who enters it untrained and inefficient.

Learn Spanish And Russian.

Given a good training in one of the many excellent secretarial training schools, or with the London County Council, there is a prospect of advancement to any girl entering this work under these conditions. The knowledge of another language than one's mother tongue nearly always means a good prospect opening out, and at this time the need for the study of languages, especially Spanish and Russian, is very great. It is especially clear that languages will be much more largely used than at present when the war is over.

Women secretaries and clerks are also being asked, and, indeed, are being given every qualification for work which before the war the ordinary business man would hardly consider giving to a person of low culture, but who was sufficiently skilled, and of whom there was no doubt whatever of the high professional morality. Women have these qualifications, but they are not to be found by every day. That women possessing this knowledge should be asked for in the open market is a significant sign of the times, and women should not be slow to take advantage of it.

Skilled Work Underrated.

The present moment is certainly one when the women of the clerical world should band themselves together in their organisations and thus form a strong enough body to force up the standard rates of pay. They should make it impossible that the business man, or the employer could think of dispensing with the services of a skilled " shorthand typist with a knowledge of book-keeping and the French language."—I quote actual facts—for 30s. a week; 35s. a week, or 40s. a week, better conditions are considered a prima facie reason to pay a confidential secretary in whom all general and special requirements are met as well as the technical knowledge of shorthand-typing, filing, and book-keeping office work.

They should become at once vehemently determined that the pocket-money wage girl shall be ruthlessly stamped out—she must either take a proper wage or none, and the women of the clerical world at large are at a public meeting of the Women Clerks and Secretaries' Association the other day, is better than a sign wage, as it leaves no record behind.

To-day, therefore, the skilled clerical worker is the only really competent person who comes into the clerical world for "patriotic motives" and asks for a low wage. She, filled with the ardour of self-sacrifice, does not see the cruel injustice she is doing up her fellow-worker, bound to keep herself on what she earns and having to face the fact that the other woman's "patriotic action" is pulling her wages down.

There is still one more enemy the woman clerk has to fight, and that is the Treasury. As long as in the Admiralty, the War Office and other Government departments a skilled shorthand-typist is paid 50s. a week, it will be very hard work to make the private employer pay anything like a decent living wage.

Man's Work At Quarter Wages.

There is no space at my disposal for a comparison of the rates of pay between men and women for the same work. But one glaring example has been brought to my notice in a Government department. A certain man was paid 43s. a week, for a job, considered to be one requiring special knowledge. A young girl of 16s. a week is not doing the same work with ease and accuracy.

Education and organization are the two weapons with which the clerical woman clerk should arm herself now, when her labour is in great demand. Armed thus, she can face the ordeal of "after the war" in far greater security than she otherwise could. For it is only by such means the exploitation of themselves and the women's work of the men whose places they are taking for, in regard to the latter point, it is perfectly certain that if employers find the work of the woman clerk as efficient as and cheaper than that of the man, the man, when he comes back from the war, will find himself out of a job.

If the woman, trained, efficient and organized, can lay down the fight, the man and women are the two weapons which will offer the greatest security to the women's work of the men whose places they are taking for, in regard to the latter point, it is perfectly certain that if employers find the work of the woman clerk as efficient as and cheaper than that of the man, the man, when he comes back from the war, will find himself out of a job.

To the point of weariness I would urge the words of one of my employers and women's "Training, efficient and organized!"

THE ESSENTIAL SEPARATE SKIRT.

The popularity of the sports coat has made the separate skirt more popular than ever. Although the economical woman does not commit the folly of wearing the skirt part of a costume unless also, she is wearing the coat as well. With an overcoat in her wardrobe, a sports coat for fine weather is a good buy, and in cold weather a country wear and some pretty blouses she knows that the extra skirt will more than double the life of her costume.

Making a skirt is not a difficult act, given a good but simple pattern to work from. Women who have never used a sewing machine before find it a simple task, though there are a few thin fabrics, but always been afraid to attempt any thing, will find it a simple matter to find out how, and buy the skirt, to find very quickly the work gets on.

Getting The Tailored Look.

Good pressing is one of the secrets of success in women's clothes. The tailor has his irons on hand all the time, and frequently holds the first few minutes over the course of its construction, while the home dressmaker too often finishes all the dressing on her garment and then iron it out—a different thing from careful pressing at the right time.

Those who know of a good tailor who will make a coat may get a smart costume at much less than the usual cost by giving out a coat to be made and doing a separate separate skirt on the same materials. To-day's Daily Sketch pattern is that of the most satisfactory skirt of the moment, which is becoming to all figures. The seams occur down the centre of the backs in the back and at each side. It is to the heart of sagging than with the full skirt of only two seams. A full skirt, for the most part, will have the characteristic to the skirt, but, of course, optional, any other type of belt could be substituted.

How To Get Patterns.

Patterns may be obtained only from The Pattern Department, The Daily Sketch Pattern, 2s. 6d., or 11d. post free. Three sizes are supplied, to fit 22, 24, and 26 inch waists. Applicants should state which sizes is required and ask for pattern 027.

Full and explicit directions for making accompany each pattern, and also a diagram showing how to lay the pattern on the material for cutting out.

The same work, for nearly all the serviceable materials, such as serge, tweed, etc., while in most cases it is considered to be useful for banners of hot day wear.

GAS ATTACK ON BRITISH FRONT IN FLANDERS

German Infantry Assault Shattered By Artillery.

British Official News.

General Headquarters, France. Sunday, 10.3 p.m.

Last night the enemy showered some activity.

Near Fricourt he made an unsuccessful raid against our trenches after the explosion of mine and heavy bombardment.

North of the Messines-Wulverghem road he initiated gas about 1 a.m. from several points and forward of about 3,000 yards, and followed this with an attack by infantry which was broken up by our artillery fire.

At one point only did a hostile party enter our trenches. This party was immediately bombed out.

Combined with this attack the enemy, after a heavy bombardment, attempted an attack with bombers near Holandeschuur.

This was equally unsuccessful against our machine-gun fire and bombs.

Several bodies were left lying in front of our lines.

In the Lous salient there has been active underground mine warfare.

To-day we carried out an effective bombardment of hostile works inside the Ypres-Pilkem road.

FRENCH CARRY TRENSCH TO THE NORTH OF VERDUN.

Six Enemy Aeroplanes, Including Three Fokkers, Brought Down.

Paris, Sunday, 11 a.m.

West of the Meuse there was a violent bombardment of our first and second lines in the region of the Mort Homme.

To the north of Cumières our troops carried a few days ago a considerable advance towards the vicinity of the Mort Homme.

To the east of the Meuse and in the Woevre the troops were still active.

On the front of the Meuse there was no important event to report except the customary cannonade.

LORD ST. ALDWYN DEAD.

"Black Michael" Survives His Son Only A Few Days.

Earl St. Aldwyn, better known in the political world as Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, died yesterday at his London house yesterday morning, after a long illness.

The tragic end of his death has followed the announcement of the death of his son and heir, Viscount Beach, who was killed in action a few days ago.

The Earl, known as "Black Michael," as he was known to his friends, was twice Chamberlain of the Exchequer, and also twice Irish Secretary, besides which he had held various other appointments in Conservative Governments.

He was born in 1857, and was therefore in his 77th year. For a considerable time past he had been confined to his bed, and from the fact that he had lain seriously ill for the past few weeks it will be understood that his son's death is no way hastened by his end.

The Earl of St. Aldwyn, a thick-skinned family, for Lady Quinlin passed too good a life to have seen...
"You Might Have Had Laurette."

They glared at each other. It was like an evil dream to the bridegroom, but from this dream there was no chance of awakening.

"Are you dead?" Betty pantied.

Vivian made no answer; he wanted to cover his face with his hands, to rush from the room. He was deeply distressed to see those red, cutting scars upon Betty's features, but it was too late; he injured her in a fit of rage, and disarmed her of his habitual reserve. He was too obnoxious by nature to turn with disgust from his wife's countenance. What terrified him was the ugly, brutish look that showed in Betty's ruling. What was the cause of this change? What had made her look so pale, so gaunt that day? It was the night, the night that had been dispersed upon the room and made it hideous. He had been afraid of that dread moment; he had been afraid of the moment when he saw her. He had been afraid of his own heart. He had been afraid of the night that had brought her to him. He had been afraid of the night that had brought her to him.

"The height of my ambition! Good heavens, if I had only known!" Betty exclaimed, "I imploded. "Don't speak in this way! There is no need for it. I am too tired, and depressed. The journey from Harewood was too much for you. You have had a night's rest you will feel differently tomorrow."

Betty Unmasks Herself.

She laughed mockingly and the blood rose to Vivian's temples, yet he kept his face in his rising anger. What had Uncle Ben said about the young lady? Betty's grotesque, gigantic frame was transformed into a perfect body. Her arms outstretched, her cheeks with tears and her eyes shining with a light that had shown through his eyes by the untenanted flicker of a match in the Corona garden. "Oh, we had not seen Laurette."

"Won't you speak?" Betty urged angrily.

THE LOVE CHEAT.

"Why should you mention Laurette?" Vivian said.

"Once, Mr. Grant smiled. "Once I meant so much to her and you didn't know it!"

"I thought that subject was threadbare, Betty it's no use your discussing it anymore."

Betty sat down and stroked her feet; she was quizzed, but the malicious spirit still lay in her soul.

"Oh, no!" Vivian replied, "It was not threadbare."

"Once she was a rather formidable rival! But you've almost extinguished my wills in preventing your heart being captivated by the most magnificent man that has ever lived in my place, telling the deception of Greycliffe."

Vivian's answer, but Vivian said nothing. He was not going to decide on the marriage because he had already beentk his purposes.

A Husband's Duties.

Betty, having already wished to hurt Vivian as violently as he had hurt her, was now relieved of her fierce tenacity of wrath. She went into the room, prowling at the high oak panel.

"I suppose I must make the best of things; any way, all the men here must do what we can, so you have a lot of bother about me—something—"

Vivian raised his hand. "What do you want him to ask?" he said. "Oh, so much; we will go into that by-and-by. You shall have whatever you like, Betty."

"I Hate You!"

The serving woman looked down at her agitation and said, "Yes, as ugly as can be, and quarrelling already, too. as true, miss; and her saying what she did so loud that I couldn't help hearing from the other side of the door—for I'd knocked twice before they heard me. If you hadn't been rich I wouldn't have married you—that's what she said, and with such a face as she's got it's surprising he ever married her at all; may heaven help him!"

"Jane, whispered Miss Tabitha in horror, and her kind face grew white and pinched. "I can't think this possible! You must have imagined I said something that was so impossible!" and, as for her face, she was in a terrible accident, for she was all, but she will soon be herself. Sure you are not prejudiced against Mrs. Grant because of a previous marriage! Now go away, I am very displeased; I shall be more so if you repeat the other services which you have told me!"

But when Jane, sullen and dewclawed, had departed, Miss Tabitha admitted to a queer making of the heart; to a precursory of some tragic cassus and a certain hope that she had thought a little before she went from her room down the corridor to consult her sister, the personnel of the room occupied by Betty, Jane, astonishing words came wildly and her breath was rushing towards a mirror and the serving-woman, carrying the visitors' cloaks, turned to her reflection. Vivian took the can from her, and she left the room to visit Miss Tabitha and help her into her bedroom.
