THE WRECKED ZEPPELIN L 15
Wonderful Exclusive Photograph Of The Baby-Killing Machine,
Taken Twenty Minutes Before She Sank In The Thames Estuary.

This historic photograph of the Zeppelin L 15, brought down by our anti-aircraft gunners or the gallant airman Lieut. Brandon, was taken just before she sank in the Thames estuary. Had she remained afloat tens of thousands of people would have hastened to see her. Fortunately, although she now lies beneath the waters, a lasting record of the giant murder craft has been obtained through the enterprise of the Press photographer.

Mr. McKenna's Budget proposals are in the form of a newspaper article, discussing various tax proposals for entertainment, sugar, cocoa, matches, and railway tickets. The article outlines the proposed tax increases and their potential revenue, along with some historical context and personal reflections on the proposals. The budget proposals are presented in a straightforward manner, with specific details on the proposed taxes and their expected impacts.

WEAK BOYS AND GIRLS.

This is the time of year when school children grow pale and weak. Confined indoors for many hours a day, studying at night perhaps, deprived of much outdoor exercise, their blood grows thin. Compare your child's complexion with what it was last summer. Probably you have not realised how thin the blood was getting because the change was so gradual.

When a child, formerly bright and active, loses colour, finds play an effort, and prefers to sit still and read, there is every reason to suspect that the blood is getting thin, that the child is anaemic sometimes there is headache and nose bleeding. These confirm the suspicion. It is a condition that is full of danger, for thin blood is an open door to many diseases, especially during changeable weather. But it is a condition that is easily remedied if taken in time. Give the child a course of Dr. Williams' pink pills, which can be obtained of any dealer; one box contains about two weeks' treatment, and these pills are a great blood-builder and invigorator. They are just the sort of tonic that many children need.

Buy a box of Dr. Williams' pink pills for pale people from your dealer, always taking care to obtain Dr. Williams'.

The NEW TAXES

The new taxation is, on the whole, startling in its moderation. Mr. McKenna says he does not wish to push the spirit of public economy too far; but he would have dispensed with serious economies were not in the course of the coming year—he did not say when.

So there is no increase in the super-tax, and war-profiteers will have to evade no moral obligation to the State, and to pay a mere 6 per cent. on unearned incomes over £5,000 a year on necessities—the rest must be either saved or spent on luxuries. Much of it is actually spent on luxuries, and to employ people now on the maintenance of luxury as an occupation is, I think, in the main of no doubt goes into war debt, but much of it does not. The just and business-like thing is to make sure of the surplus. So much for the super-tax as an individual measure.

As I understand, the House will insist on a still higher taxable percentage; and will further insist that this percentage shall actually be taken. It should also be mentioned that the term "war profits" is widened in its scope, and that all firms who are waging rich war of the rich, shall be compelled to pay the taxes. What is the other end of the scale?

The tax on small incomes is raised on earned incomes up to £590 from 2s. 6d. to 24s. 6d., on small incomes over £590 it is raised from 2s. 1d. to 2s. 6d. Moreover, there is a further additional tax of 3d. on a second crop of goods and services. There is also a tax on matches, lottery tickets, and amusements. Against this as a set of measures, so far as the licence duty on motor-cars and motor-cycles.

The taxes on amusements and railway tickets are excellent, but there should be no tax on the sale of admissions to entertainments wherever the charge is less than 1s. Nor can we content with a tax of 1s. on the higher priced seats. When Mr. McKenna is proposing to take one quarter of the professional tickets it is grotesquely unjust that he should take such a small proportion of the deepest tickets. A person who pays 12d. for admission can afford to pay nothing. A person who pays a guinea for admission can afford to pay more than two shillings.

The tax on railway tickets, too, there should be greater differentiation. All first-class tickets should be taxed more heavily than third.

This licence duty on motors is well-considered, though business cars should be exempt, and the duty on other cars should be intended rather to stop their use for pleasure than for profit.

BROADLY, we may say that: Mr. McKenna has not risen to his responsibilities. We could surely stop slipping so swiftly behind the German and the French, and lose the luxury power more towards the cost of the war, we could surely collar the professor. Something more definite has not been done for the white-star passengers for the disabled, and I rather hoped that the Chancellor of the Exchequer would be allowing for a much greater number of annual recruits. What is the Government doing for the soldier's home?

McKenna, Budgetor. Portrait was Budget Day, and the most important person for the house was the newly deceased Reginald McKenna. He has made a step in the right direction by allowing an officer to be put to the test by a competent committee. He will not be allowed to continue in life as a mere speculator, and will talk to his exchequer the thing he was for him a very "special" Chancellorship of the Exchequer. His income as a financier on a gargantuan scale has never been disputed, and it is not a question of doing the Adultery as some people consider. This picture by Tom Tit is said George "Graves.

Buoyant Speech. There was a speech of buoyant impression made by those who heard it by its buoyant note. Everyone agreed that if the speech could be read by the people of the country it would have immediate effect. The Chancellor maintained the dignity which characterises his usual Budget speeches. His language was simple, and the relations involved method of his predecessor. Evidently finance is Reginald's forte, and the means, who is an expert in trade, was an interested listener, as usual.

Repeater.

The taxes—all none or less expected—were taken good part, and Mr. McKenna was on the part of none of the Snares at the railway ticket tax. But an unusual deduction was got that the government might not be out in ten millions.

What about the other end of the scale?

The tax on small incomes is raised on earned incomes up to £590 from 2s. 1d. to 2s. 6d., on small incomes over £590 it is raised from 2s. 1d. to 2s. 6d. Moreover, there is an additional halfpenny tax of sugar, a large extra duty on cordials, a bill for a higher duty on matches, a duty on tobacco, matches, lottery tickets and amusements. Against this as a set of measures, so far as the licence duty on motor-cars and motor-cycles.

The taxes on amusements and railway tickets are excellent, but there should be no tax on the sale of admissions to entertainments wherever the charge is less than 1s. The Hygienic Way To Dry Dishes.

It is not through the scarcity of servants or the modern interest in labour-saving that the habit of drying dishes with a cloth will be given up, but from an improved understanding of hygiene," says one woman who does her own housework. "It is much cleaner to scald the dishes and let them dry themselves. You don't need any special apparatus for this method, as an ordinary wire basket will do. Set the dishes in the basket after washing, pour a littleful of boiling water over them, and then set the basket on the range or in the oven if it happens to be warm. In summer I set the basket out on a sunny windowsill for a short time. The dishes are much cleaner than when mopped with a cloth, and the labour and expense of keeping a supply of cloths going is not required."

A Simple Cement For Broken China.

In pre-war days, when a piece of fine china was broken one may merely have gone out to buy a substitute, but nowadays the possibilities of mending are carefully considered. An almost certain cement, consisting of a soft paste. A very delicate piece of this carelessness is all the more evidence. It happens that dishes, with a good pinch of celery and a little briliiantine, dropping it in a quart of milk, gradually thickened. The hair to make it look sticky. A quarter of milk was gradually added, then the mashed potatoes, and the whole stirred until it thickened.

A Green And White Lace Monrosee.

A girl's birthday luncheon, given recently, was appropriate to the times as inexpensive and almost frugal, yet it achieved distinction by being entirely green and white. White chintz decorated the table spread with a green-bordered white cloth. Green and white striped ices and a white fish with a green sauce were especially attractive, but the patisserie sprinkled white soap was the dish which the guests all copied. It was very easily made. Three large, roughly-bolted potatoes were rubbed through a sieve. Two tablespoonfuls of butter were slowly melted and blended with two tablespoonfuls of flour, a little of the Monrosee Mixture of chopped onion, generous seasonings of salt and pepper, and a good pinch of celery salt. A quart of milk was gradually added, then the mashed potatoes, and the whole stirred until it thickened.

Englishwomen's Hair-Dressing.

Englishwomen, says a French milliner, are too careless of the line at the back of the neck where the hair ends. Just now, with the swept-up hair-dressing and the Niniche hat, this carelessness is all the more in evidence. If the Parisienne finds that her hair is broken and unruly at the back, she judiciously applies a little brilliantine, dropping it first into the palm of her hand, so that the contents do not get enough on the hair to make it stick. A little white egg beater with a spout of warm water will serve to keep the stray ends in place.

SOCIETY MARRIAGE.

CAME HOME TO WED.

The bridal suite was copied from the 'Palatine,' Victoria Street, Manchester. The handsome 'Pelham,' The时候, given recently, was appropriate to the times as inexpensive and almost frugal, yet it achieved distinction by being entirely green and white. BURNINGSMARTING PIMPLES ON BABY'S

FACE AND BODY. Grunt Formed Disfiguring

BADLY. Could Not Sleep.

HEALED BY CUTICURA.

"My baby's trouble started when he was three months old. Pimples which seemed full of water came on his face and lower parts of his body, they burst and spread, a nasty crust forming on top disfiguring him badly. He could not sleep for this burning and smarting. I saw Cuticura Soap and Ointment advertised and sent for a free sample. After the first dressing he was relieved but I bought more and he was healed." (Signed) Mrs. R. Pickering, Court 4, Athelstan House, Lowestoft, Eng., July 25, 1913.

ARMY’S TRIBUTE AT A NAVAL FUNERAL.

Scenes at the funeral of five bluejackets lost by a mishap to a liberty cutter during the great gale. The coffins were borne on a gun-carriage and a farm wagon, and the Army shared in the tribute to the Navy’s dead.

DISRAELI BETWEEN TWO STOOLS.

Mr. L. N. Parker’s Play And Why It Should Be Seen.

Benjamin Disraeli, the greatest of Conservative statesmen, wit, cynic, dandy, and knave, who never courted the slightest preoccupation for primness, is in a rather unfortunate position as a figure of drama. The position is not confined to the fact that Mr. Louis Napoleon Parker has written a play round him, prefixed yesterday afternoon. His reputation would have survived the ordeal but as the protagonist of an historical drama he is between two stools. He is neither distant enough in point of time to be a figure of history nor near enough to our own days for the presentation of him on the stage of the Royal Lyceum to be a matter of absorbing interest to the man in the street.

By these circumstances and by the methods adopted by the author one is compelled to consider “Disraeli,” the play, in the narrower light of how far Mr. Dennis Nolly has succeeded in giving a faithful portrait of Disraeli, the man. Mr. Parker’s portrait has many more points to it than the sallow face, the black waistcoat, the elaborate clothes, the genial expression, and the passion for the Highlands, for instance. Here is a man who had ideas and the brains to carry them out: a man whose ambition for his adopted wife was very real and very touching. A man who could mingle personal adoration for Queen Victoria with a knowing show of contempt for what her position as Empress of India meant for his country.

If Messrs. Parker has not given us a very good play, he has, with the help of Mr. Eade, shown a very great man.

When the birds were gone, some people for the job had, better see Mr. Parker’s part form perfect if only to give their imagination a little exercise.

The Love Cheat.

By YELVA BURNETT.

Mrs. Cheever said nothing, and Laurette slumped over more and more perturbed and uncomfortable.

"Not in any spirit of petty revenge," Laurette stammered, as she turned away.

Mrs. Cheever remained silent.

"But," said Laurette, wishing that Betty would stop interrupting her, "he took me to the door and almost..."

"Laurette!" shouted Betty, laughing.

"Betty, I feel this terribly, you must know this"

A sound from the other reached her. Betty resumed her smoking, blowing delicate ringlets of smoke through the air.

"You won't speak to me now, Betty."

Laurette stumbled into a chair. She was glad to do so, as she would be too much between pat and duty.

"Don't do this..."

"I don't think you'll ever understand, Betty."

Laurette's Resolves Weaken.

"Betty, don't you see my own position?"

Betty, who had been listening with a vacant stare, was now shaken out of her reverie.

"You are bound to disclose my true identity to the world."

"You will happen."

And Laurette went to the other room to be alone.

Laurette, however, had no place to go. She was in the hands of her husband. She had no time to think of her own motives.

"I should not say that, Betty. I should let him think you were ill when you arrived and didn't know what you were saying."

"Laurette," the widow, responded, in a small subdued voice.

"You had better get at the truth of the matter and fix things up."

"If Betty, you can't understand that it matters to me, to tell the truth of the matter, as a woman, unless I've been affected by any other womanly affection for me."

"I am sure that I am not affected by any other womanly affection for me."

Laurette's Resolve Weakens.

"Betty, don't you see my own position?"

Betty, who had been listening with a vacant stare, was now shaken out of her reverie.

"You are bound to disclose my true identity to the world."

"You will happen."
