British Expeditionary Force

"It may interest you to know what immense service Phosferine has been to me when suffering from nervous exhaustion due to severe shock and exposure. I was on board the Royal Edward when she was torpedoed in the Aegean Sea, and being several hours in the water before my rescuers appeared went through an experience that left me as weak as a child, and my nerves completely shattered. I became an inmate of two Hospitals in succession, and although benefited to an extent, felt a long way off from again being of service to my King and Country. I was sent back to England, and soon after landing obtained a supply of Phosferine-—after taking three 3/9 bottles of your liquid my nerves were fully restored and I went back to my duty as fit as a fiddle and anxious to do my bit. I now feel young and strong and as though 20 years had been lifted from my shoulders. If a soldier's grateful experience of your Grand Tonic is of interest, you are quite welcome to use it."

This very competent R.A.M.C. Corporal says plainly he never expected to be a fit man again after his terrible experiences, yet although the best Hospital treatment utterly failed to relieve his awful nerve distress, Phosferine has set him back to duty feeling he has regained the energy and vitality of twenty years ago—to put it simply, Phosferine aroused the stunned nerve centres to repair the nervous waste.

When you require the Best Tonic Medicine, see you get PHOSFERINE

OLD LADY OF 77’S SPLENDID “BIT.”

Undertook To Dors 2,000 Pairs Of Socks And Has Done Half.

A maiden lady, aged 77, who lives at Camberwell, has been doing on 25,000 pairs of soldiers’ socks to be distributed to her friends and has sold 1,200 pairs already. Her house is in Putney Road. Her chance came one day, and she promptly took it. She was talking to a Red Cross appeal officer last year about her family’s buying soldiers’ socks to be driven at, and he suggested that she collect the socks. She was so impressed by this that she said she would like to do every one of them. She had been a nurse for 42 years, and her home is in Putney Road. She was 77 years of age. The donor of this splendid lady’s socks is the Daily Sketch yesterday. "I always wanted to do something for the young," the old lady said. "I wanted to do something for the young." To Permanently Cure Bad Foot Troubles.

What Soldiers Do to Cure Their Feet.

By Howard Evans

Many readers of the Daily Sketch may be interested to know how I finally succeeded in curing the painful corns that used to result from my first few days of route marching. After numerous consultations with the medical officer of a certain army contingent I eventually decided to go to the doctor myself. He had advised me to wear something which would be more comfortable than the ordinary boots I was using. I therefore got hold of a pair of canvas shoes with very thick soles and long toes, and when I put them on I was surprised at how much better they felt. The soles were very soft and pliable, and the toes were roomy enough to allow my feet to spread out as they naturally would. I had tried various other remedies before, but nothing seemed to work as well as these canvas shoes.

Then I thought of trying the old-fashioned remedies of the soldiers. I remembered that in the army years ago they used to use a lot of water and salt, and I decided to try this as well. I soaked my feet in a large bucket of water and salt for an hour every night. The salt helped to draw out the infection, and the water helped to keep the feet clean. I also found that if I walked on a soft surface, such as sand or grass, it helped to relieve the pressure on the corns. I also tried using a special foot powder, which seemed to help as well.

In the end, after trying many different remedies, I found that the best way to cure my foot troubles was to use the canvas shoes and the water and salt. The shoes were comfortable and allowed my feet to spread out, and the salt and water helped to draw out the infection. I found that after wearing the shoes for a week or two, the corns started to disappear. I continued to use the shoes and the remedies for a few more weeks, and by the time I returned to England, I was able to walk comfortably without any corns or other foot troubles.

Yours truly,
Howard Evans
