Public Administration in Zimbabwe 158
Critical overview of Mukonoweshuro’s contribution to Public Administration
1. The preferred length of articles is about 5000 words.
2. Articles are to be submitted ready for the press: finally edited, stylistically polished and carefully proofread. Readability, fluency of style and clarity of exposition are essential.
3. The article should represent an original contribution to the current knowledge in the subject field AND/OR provide a comprehensive review of the current body of knowledge.
4. The article should contain a relevant and suitable summary (abstract) in English of between 150 and 200 words.
5. The Chief Editor reserves the right to make language alterations as he/she sees fit to accommodate the style and presentation of articles to the house style. Where major changes are necessary, the text may be returned to the author for correction or approval. Copyright is transferred to AJPA on acceptance for publication.
6. Relevant key words should be provided.
7. Composition
   - Introduction: a short, concise synopsis of the current knowledge in the field must be provided. The introduction should also serve to provide a rationale for the rest of the article.
   - Methodology/research process: an adequate, clear description of the methodology employed and/or the research process followed should be provided.
   - Discussion: a comprehensive discussion of the major/primary findings should be provided. The discussion must be relevant in the context of the research methodology/process described in point 6. Furthermore, it should be adequate in terms of the depth and scope.
   - Conclusion: conclusions drawn in the article should be appropriate and justifiable in the light of the research process/methodology.
   - References:
     - The list of references must contain sources that are recent and relevant to the research described. All sources must be listed alphabetically by authors’ surnames, in the following format:
8. Source references in the text should be in the Harvard style, using the authors surname only, e.g. (Kamanga 1986:234-45).
9. Only genuine footnotes should be used, i.e. notes containing relevant elucidation of the text. Footnotes should be kept to a minimum. Numbered footnotes should appear at the bottom of the page. The position of the note should be indicated in the text in superscript Arabic figures without brackets.
10. Abbreviations and acronyms should be avoided (except where an acronym, e.g. is current parlance). When an acronym is to be used, it must be written in full when used for the first time with the acronym in brackets. e.g. National Council of Provinces (NCOP)
11. Italics should not be over used for emphasis. Latin phrases such as per se must be italicised. Words in languages other than that of the manuscript should be given in quotation marks.

12. Statistical and other tables should be labelled. Tables, as well as mathematical or similar symbols and expressions should be kept to a minimum.

13. Diagrams, sketches and graphs must be submitted in print-ready high resolution JPEG format as separate files (i.e. not copied into Word). Each diagram must have a short explanatory label.

14. If applicable, full details of the origin of the article must be provided (e.g. a paper delivered at a congress).

15. Refereeing is always anonymous.

16. Articles will only be refereed if accompanied by a declaration that the text has not been published or submitted for publication elsewhere.

17. The author of a published article will receive one free copy of the relevant issue of the journal.

18. Page fees are payable by authors.

Note: Plagiarism is a serious offence and could result in actions against the author.
Parliament has passed more than 870 pieces of legislation since 1994. Some of the acts that were passed repealed discriminatory legislation of the Apartheid regime. However, a large portion of the acts represent new policies to enable Government to ensure equitable service delivery to all the members of society irrespective of race, gender or age. The new policies imply that a proper administrative system exists that could give effect to the decisions of Government. Therefore, it was expedient for Government to devote a Cabinet Lekgotla from 4-6 September 2012 to its progress with the implementation of policies. In the Post-Cabinet Lekgotla media statement released on 7 September 2012, Government reaffirmed its commitment to accountable actions. At the Lekgotla, Cabinet received 17 strategic integrated projects (SIPs) including the question of water and sanitation. Progress was noted on several programmes while the National Development Plan with 18 key areas was acknowledged.

The Lekgotla highlights the need for effective and efficient administrative and managerial actions by Government’s senior management cadre. More important perhaps is the need to ensure that these actions result in actual output. Successes have been noted by Government at its recent Lekgotla, e.g. reductions in the mortality rate of under five year olds and an increase in artisans qualifying, but many services are still under stress. This situation results in marches, damaging the image of Government among members of society and internationally. The significance of the appointment of suitably qualified managers in the public sector is clear. It is indeed one of the goals of the African Journal of Public Affairs to promote good governance and to publish articles that could contribute to the advancement of public sector administration and management.

In this issue of AJPA thirteen articles had been selected dealing with a variety of administrative and managerially related topical issues. Hofisi and Mago consider the impact of compensation on employee performance by investigating the case of the Premier Medical Aid Society of Zimbabwe. This is followed by Nambalirwa and Sindane’s view on the governance nexus in Uganda. Naidoo focuses on the critical need for ethical leadership as a requirement to curb corruption and promote good governance. Mthethwa investigates the critical dimensions of policy implementation while Kuye and Ajam contribute to the developmental state debate by considering the role of leadership and governance in public sector finance. Pillay and Sayeed promote to the need for integrating skills development and professionalism into curricula by using the food security policy as a case in point. Fourie and Reutener return to the issue of finance by revisiting the participatory potential in budgeting. McLaren and Heath turn their attention to the contribution the public sector could make in promoting tourism in rural areas from a stakeholder’s perspective. Koma follows with another contribution in this issue to the developmental concept by investigating the role of local government in this debate. Raga, Taylor and Jumba formed a team to investigate the effects of decentralisation on service delivery by using human resource issues in two districts in Uganda as a case study. Vyas-Doorgapersad investigates the paradigm shift in local governance in relation to decentralisation and capacity-building. Kuye and Shuping contribute to the continuing debate on leadership and governance issues by focussing on Regional Economic Communities on the African continent. In the last article Nhede pays tribute to Mukonoweshuro’s contribution to public administration in Zimbabwe.
The contributions in this issue contain two articles on Zimbabwe, and two on issues in Uganda. Two articles touch on the developmental phenomenon while two address decentralisation and three attend to leadership issues. Without repeating the contents it could be deduced that the issue contains a well balanced spread of articles of contemporary importance.
